Pope supports Latin workers

CIUDAD GUAYANA, Venezuela (AP) — In the blazing heat of Venezuela's industrial interior, Pope John Paul II condemned the exploitation of workers and "dehumanizing" effects of technology Tuesday in a rousing farewell speech before going on to Ecuador.

"Work exists for man," he declared at an outdoor Mass in Ciudad Guayana, a city of steel, iron and aluminum industries, "but man is not to be the slave of the machine of technology."

Cheering followers responded: "The working masses await you!"

In his homily, the pope declared that the church stands beside the worker and spoke out against social inequities, especially in the Third World.

The pontiff stood under a yellow canopy atop a flower-covered altar on an open and dusty red clay field, with only a slight river breeze easing temperatures that hovered around 90 degrees.

Venezuela was the first stop on John Paul's sixth Latin American tour. He arrived Tuesday afternoon in Quito, capital of Ecuador, and will stay in the country until Friday. He then goes to Peru, and to Trinidad-Tobago in the Caribbean.

Meese claims that he's clean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese III said Tuesday he has met "ethical as well as legal" standards of conduct, but a report made public at the insistence of senators concluded that he may have violated federal law.

That finding was reached by two attorneys in the Office of Government Ethics, but they were overruled by the head of the office, David Martin, who was appointed by President Ronald Reagan.

The report was made public as the Senate Judiciary Committee opened new hearings into Meese's fitness to serve as attorney general.

OGE attorneys concluded that Meese may have violated federal statutes "prohibiting a federal employee from accepting a gift from any other federal employee receiving less pay than himself."

Meese contended before the senators at his confirmation hearing that Stein's report last year "left no stone unturned" in investigating his behavior and informing senators about his conduct.

Meese, 53, originally appeared before the committee last March, but action on his nomination was postponed because of the investigation.

In opening statements by senators, one — Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio — said he would oppose the nomination. Eight said they supported the presidential counselor, nine contended they were undecided.

Reagan charms 'Bloom' creator

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — President Ronald Reagan liked a Berke Breathed caricature of his wife Nancy in Sunday's "Bloom County" newspaper comic strip.

So much, in fact, that he called Breathed to offer his compliments.

Breathed, who draws his nationally syndicated strip from his home in Iowa City, said the president's call Monday left him with a first-hand impression of the Reagan charm.

"Whatever people call it — his charm or 'the Reagan magic' — it's definitely there," Breathed said Tuesday in a telephone interview. "He was almost deferential to me. To realize he's the most powerful man in the world and he still comes across like Uncle Joe."

Sunday's comic strip featured a frenzied middle-aged woman who is attempting to place a classified ad for a new husband — "one that won't continually call me 'Ol' Dumpy.'"

Hanging on the wall in the background of the strip was a portrait of a placid, smiling Nancy Reagan.
