Reagan hails new revolution; stresses economic expansion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ronald Reagan declared "a second American Revolution" of hope, opportunity, technological progress and the promise of a free and peaceful world, in his fourth State of the Union address Wednesday night.

Of his first four years, the president said, "We did what we promised, and a great industrial giant is reborn."

In the address before a joint session of Congress on his 74th birthday, Reagan set his agenda for a second term, saying:

"The time has come to proceed toward a great new challenge — a Second American Revolution of hope and opportunity; a revolution carrying us to new heights of progress... a revolution of spirit that taps the soul of America... and a revolution that carries beyond our shores the gold promise of human freedom in a world at peace."

Reagan said he spoke for all Americans and those abroad who yearn for freedom.

"We are here to speak for millions in our inner cities who long for real jobs, safe neighborhoods, and schools that truly teach," Reagan said. "We are here to speak for the American farmer, the entrepreneur and every worker in industries fighting to modernize and compete."

"And yes, we are here to stand — and proudly so — for all who struggle to break free from totalitarianism; for all who know in their hearts that freedom is the one true path to peace and human happiness."

In an address aides had predicted would speak hopefully of the prospects for nuclear arms control while warning the United States remains determined to defend its interests, Reagan said, "We are poised as never before to create a safer, freer, more peaceful world."

But he added, "We cannot play innocents abroad in a world that is not innocent. Nor can we be passive when freedom is under siege."

The president reiterated his support for legislation giving tax breaks to companies that locate in poor neighborhoods and for a new, lower minimum wage for teenagers.

Atiyeh willing to change tax proposal

SALEM (AP) — Gov. Vic Atiyeh says he's open to changes in his sales tax plan, mainly because of the "political perception" that his plan could hurt individuals while benefiting businesses.

At his weekly news conference, Atiyeh on Wednesday insisted that the "shift" cited by a recent legislative study is subject to interpretation and is largely one of perception.

The governor also said, however, that he's concerned it could be used as a "political tool" against the sales tax.

For that reason, Atiyeh said he's "willing to look at ideas" on how his 5 percent sales tax plan might be redrawn to soften the effects of the tax burden shift.

A study by the Legislative Revenue Office concluded that such a shift would occur if all of the money from a sales tax is used to reduce property taxes, as Atiyeh wants.
