Bruins ruin Oregon finale

By Brent De La Paz
 Of the Emerald

With all the fanfare and emotion of five seniors playing their final game in McArthur Court, the Oregon men's basketball team seemed ready to close out a roller-coaster season on a upward and winning note.

Oregon coach Don Monson started seniors Blair Rasmussen, Chris Harper, Greg Bell, Greg Trapp and Mike Matheson as a tribute for their contributions to the Duck basketball program.

The only problem is the Ducks gave a final performance symbolic of their 1984-85 yo-yo season. Oregon rebounded but only to see the UCLA Bruins slip past in the end with a 72-69 heart-breaking victory Saturday night before a sell-out crowd of 10,099.

This season has had so many twists and turns for the Ducks that even Indiana Jones couldn't have escaped all the perilous situations Oregon has encountered in the topsy-turvy Pacific-10 Conference. The Ducks tried another narrow escape Saturday, but found the familiar Temple of Gloom in the end as UCLA hit its free throws to hold on to the win.

The Ducks found themselves in a battle with a Bruin team, who was looking at the game as a springboard into the 64-team National Collegiate Association Basketball Championship extravaganza. With that in mind, UCLA raced to a 30-21 advantage at halftime before the Ducks could get untracked.

At the beginning of the second half, UCLA wanted to prove its 16-11 record was anything but mediocre and worthy of an NCAA bid. The Ducks were the ones to pay the price as the Bruins ripped off a 17-8 run to go ahead 47-29 with 12:41 left. It seemed the Ducks' farewell celebration had laid an egg before the capacity Mac Court crowd.

But like so many times this season, the Ducks woke from their sleeping lumber to make a game out of it. Oregon awakened to cut the Bruins' 18-point lead to 12. Kenny Sprague and Greg Trapp led the charge as the Ducks closed within 47-35 with 11:31 left.

From there, Oregon slowly whittled the lead despite having its best offensive weapon, Rasmussen, playing on borrowed time with four fouls.

"I can't say enough for the way we came back," Monson said of the Ducks, who finished 15-16 for the year and 8-10* in the conference.

Rasmussen picked up his fifth foul with 1:55 left. UCLA's Dave Immel, the former Oregon prep standout, hit one of two fouls shots to give the Bruins a 63-54 lead. UCLA coach Walt Hazzard was confident of the victory and the Bruins' post-season chances.

However, UCLA and Oregon got into a fouling duel that brought the Ducks back into the game. With 1:05 left, the Bruins still had a nine-point lead, 68-59, but Oregon's four remaining seniors weren't about to give up.

First, Matheson hit a bank shot to cut the lead to seven, but missed the free throw on a possible three-point play. Then Trapp nailed a rebound bucket to cut it to five points. UCLA added a foul shot to up the lead to six points with 38 seconds remaining, 69-63.

Then Harper took command of the Ducks' final run as he hit a 7-footer to cut the lead to four, 69-65 with 28 seconds left. On the inbounds play, Harper made a brilliant play of stealing Kevin
