

New evidence will send Goetz case back to court

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge on Tuesday authorized the Manhattan district attorney to resubmit the Bernhard Goetz subway shooting case to a grand jury.

District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said Acting Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane signed the order after prosecutors presented new evidence in the case. Morgenthau said the case will be presented to a grand jury next week.

Morgenthau refused to say what the new evidence was.

A grand jury in January refused to indict Goetz for the attempted murder of four teen-agers he shot on a subway train in Manhattan on Dec. 22. He was indicted only on weapons charges.

"I don't want to go into any detail. This will be a secret proceeding and I don't want to influence it," Morgenthau said.

He said his office had applied to resubmit the case to a grand jury on March 6, but withdrew the application the next day. Prosecutors submitted the current application "in its final form" Tuesday, and Crane approved it, Morgenthau said.

A grand jury indicted Goetz in January on charges of weapons possession rather than more serious charges such as attempted murder or assault in the shootings on a Manhattan subway.

Goetz said he shot the youths after they demanded $5 of him.

None of the four victims in the Dec. 22 shooting testified before that panel because Morgenthau refused to grant them immunity from prosecution on possible charges stemming from the incident.

Since then, officials have released tape recordings in which Goetz said he fired a fifth shot at one of the four young men after telling him: "You don't look so bad, here's another."

Reagan-Mubarak talks end

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ronald Reagan said after a meeting with President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt today that Mubarak's efforts to get Middle East peace talks underway are encouraging, but haven't gone far enough.

In an apparent rejection of Mubarak's proposal for the United States to meet with a delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians, Reagan said the parties to the Middle East conflict are "still a long way from the negotiating table."

Reagan did not refer specifically to Mubarak's proposal as the two leaders delivered their departure statements on the White House South Lawn.

But Reagan's reference was clear when he said, "Let us hope that the positive trends that have recently begun in the region will be strengthened...."

Mubarak came to Washington to appeal to Reagan to approve a high-level U.S. meeting with a joint delegation of Palestinians and Jordanians as a first step toward direct peace talks between the Arabs and Israel. But senior administration officials said they were worried that Mubarak's strategy was aimed at promoting back-door contacts between Washington and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The senior officials said the administration would have no part of that, and Reagan's statement indicated Mubarak was given no reason to believe such a strategy would work.

But Mubarak said the administration shouldn't miss "a golden opportunity for peace," urging the United States to act "to keep the momentum going" from recent peace moves.
