The Oregon Daily Emerald reported Tuesday that the play, "Excursion Fare" will compete for national honors at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. The play is not being performed for competition, but is being showcased to honor its selection as best original play by the American College Theater Festival, a national award.

And on Wednesday, the Emerald erroneously gave Paul Zadoff the title of Jewish Student Union director. Kim Fuson, a University junior studying sociology, is the director of that group.

Szymanski tribute slated Saturday

A memorial service for sociology Professor Albert Szymanski will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. in Room 167 EMU. Szymanski, 43, died sometime during the weekend of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

The public is invited to attend both the memorial service and the reception to be held in the Faculty Club following the service.

The University flag will also be flown at half-mast today as a memorial to Szymanski.

Some of Szymanski's students have established a memorial trust fund. Checks can be made out to the McKenzie River Gathering, says Jim Salt, Szymanski's friend and a teaching assistant in one of his classes.

"Students told me time after time that Al was the most vigorous lecturer in the University, even if they disagreed with every single thing he said," Salt said, adding that many people came to the University sociology department expressly to study under Szymanski.

Szymanski is survived by his parents and a sister. Salt said funeral services for him will be held in Rhode Island.
