

Three University public hearings planned

The University has scheduled three public hearings on proposed administrative rules and amendments on Tuesday in Room 101 EMU.

The first hearing, at 3 p.m., will concern a rule for collecting accounts and notes receivable.

At 3:30 p.m., the topic will be proposed rules for appealing University library fines and policy.

The last hearing, scheduled to begin at 4 p.m., will focus on proposed amendments to an existing rule on general fund-raising on campus.

The proposal to collect accounts receivable specifies techniques the Office of Business Affairs may use in collecting debts, including such methods as withholding transcripts, denying registration and using collection agencies. The proposed rule also outlines an appeal procedure.

Two rules involving the library would codify existing procedure. One outlines a three-step process by which library borrowers may appeal fines and charges they believe have been assessed in error and provides an "extenuating circumstances" appeal.

A second proposed rule outlines two avenues for appeal of current library policy and describes how new library policies may be proposed.

The fund-raising rule amendments reorganize the structure of the existing rule to simplify understanding of University fund-raising requirements, clarify that all such activities are subject to prior review by the University president (or a designee) and correct outdated agency and unit names and titles.

Those interested may present oral or written statements at the hearings, or send written statements in advance to Muriel Jackson, assistant to the vice president for administration, in Oregon Hall.

Copies of each of the rules are available during regular business hours at the library's reference desk and the offices of the president, 110 Johnson Hall, and the ASUO president, Suite 4 EMU.

Music scholarships awarded

Music scholarships totaling nearly $51,000 were awarded to 33 of the 74 finalists who auditioned March 15-16 for the Ruth Lorraine Close awards at the University music school.

The scholarships are worth $3,000, $2,000 and $1,000 each, says Morette Rider, music school dean.

Selection of the finalists was based on preliminary screening of applicants by the music faculty. The contest was open to students of voice, harp, keyboard, all orchestral instruments, composition and music history or education.

The awards were started in the early 1970s through a bequest from the late Ruth Lorraine Close, a harpist and composer who attended the University. Each year, in keeping with preferences expressed in the bequest, one of the judges is a harpist, one is a composer and the remaining two represent other areas in music, which vary from year to year.

The judges for this year's contest included composer Morton Subotnick of the California Institute for the Arts in Los Angeles; Armando Ghitalla, a music professor at the University of Michigan and former principal trumpet for the Boston Symphony; William Jones, conductor of the Greater Minneapolis Youth Symphonies; and Ann Mason Stockton, president of the American Harp Society.

will save Eugene library's rural bookmobile and nursing home services, keep county libraries from having to cut service hours and help pay for the cost of an inter-library computer system.

The levy property tax is estimated to be 7.5 cents per $1,000 assessed value, or $3.75 annually for the owner of a $50,000 home. Levy funds allocated to the libraries are estimated at $184,000 to Eugene, $65,000 to Springfield, $19,000 to the Siuslaw Library District at Florence, $12,400 to the Fern Ridge Community Library, $8,400 to Cottage Grove, $4,800 to Junction City and $3,400 to Oakridge.

Lane Community College asked for and was refused a $1.53 million three-year serial levy. This is the sixth tax measure failure the school has faced since the last successful measure passed in Nov. 1980. School officials said the money had been earmarked to help cover the costs of operating expenses and the repair of aging campus buildings, as well as other projects.

LCC board member incumbent Charlene Curry will retain her Zone Three position. Curry has served on the board for three consecutive terms beginning in 1978.
