

Batters lose last two

By Adam Worcester

Oregon closed its best softball season since 1980 on a down note Tuesday, losing a pair of 1-0 games at Portland State University.

The Ducks finished up 19-25, including a 2-7 record against PSU.

Portland State's Ronda Haun out-dueled Sony Schroeder in nine innings in the first game, yielding three hits while striking out six. Schroeder gave up four hits and fanned one batter as she ended with a 7-12 season record.

In the second game, the Vikings scored a run in the first inning and pitcher Leslie VanOver made it stand up with a two-hitter. Sue Voeller (8-9) took the defeat for Oregon despite striking out five batters and surrendering only four hits.

Haun's two triples — one each game — paced PSU, while Lesley Stine rapped a single per game for the Ducks. Oregon's Stephanie Heisler collected a single in five at bat as she finished her college career.

All that's left for the team this season is an awards banquet Thursday night at the Oregon Electric Station. But based on this season, the future seems bright for a young Duck squad that carries 10 freshmen, six sophomores, one junior, and loses only Heisler to graduation.

Developing muscles and finances for club sports

After a crowded basketball game at McArthur Court, the club sports crew team wanders into the empty building to sweep away a menagerie of gum wrappers, spilled popcorn, cigarette butts and other assorted garbage in order to pay for their new racing shells.

The Tae Kwon Do team spent last Sunday morning cleaning up Hayward Field after the Pepsi Relays to bring in revenue for a chance to compete in Europe.

The lacrosse and ski teams spread barkdust on the jogging track around the intramural fields to raise funds for their clubs.

School "clean-ups" are not the only way club teams earn money. The sailing team is sponsoring sailing clinics and lessons to the public to earn money for their team. Next year, the ski team is considering holding a large ski swap in order to get the team to Whistler, Canada, for next season's regional competition.
