new lectures will provide both a contrast and a complement to the current Contemporary Issues speeches sponsored by the Cultural Forum.

The forum has already hosted a speech by John Stockwell, a former member of the CIA who is now speaking out against the covert actions of the organization. And this Thursday it will present John Keppel, a former foreign service officer who will speak on the Korean Airline incident.

Joannides says he would like to try and attract some bigger names and audiences in the future.

"I want to get people out of their homes and listening to contemporary issues," he says. "I want to put on lectures that stir controversy and get people talking through the rest of the year."

For more information about the lecture series or individual speakers can call the Cultural Forum at 686-4373.
