

Fadeley unofficially declares candidacy

(AP) — Sen. Ed Fadeley, D-Eugene, said Wednesday he will run for the Democratic nomination for governor of Oregon.

"I plan to run for governor because the people cannot get a good deal any other way," the Eugene lawyer said.

In an interview with KATU-TV of Portland, Fadeley said he will oppose former Portland Mayor Neil Goldschmidt in the Democratic primary next May. Goldschmidt is the only announced candidate for the Democratic nomination.

"I don't claim I'm the best deal, but I'm the only one who'll be able to serve the average person's interests," Fadeley said.

The 55-year-old lawyer has been in the Legislature since 1961, serving as president of the senate during the 1983 session. He said he was discouraged to enter the governor's race after serving as the unofficial leader of the campaign to defeat a state sales tax. That measure was soundly defeated by Oregon voters Sept. 17.

Fadeley said Goldschmidt has abandoned the principles of the Democratic Party.

"He has, a long time ago, moved himself out of the mainstream of Oregonians' needs and thinking," Fadeley said.

Fadeley said he will formally announce his plans to run for governor today in Springfield before the Lane County Democratic Central Committee.

mit might await a post-summit decision.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes declined to comment on whether any significant agreements were forged, adhering to the news blackout established during Tuesday's first summit session.

Speakes promised a briefing following the ceremony set for 10 a.m. Geneva time (4 a.m. EST) and said it would be clear to observers then whether the summit could be considered a success.

The Soviets had sought a final ceremony for weeks, but there was no word on Reagan's acceptance until almost midnight Wednesday, Geneva time.

Speakes refused to say whether a joint statement or communique would be issued or whether the leaders would sign specific agreements. He said neither Reagan nor Gorbachev would take questions, but the Soviets indicated Gorbachev would hold a news conference after the ceremony had ended.

The ceremony was to be Reagan's final event in Geneva before leaving to brief NATO leaders in Brussels en route to Washington and a speech to a joint meeting of Congress.

Wednesday night's dinner was to have been a social affair, but like the formal negotiating sessions, the agenda didn't hold.

"The atmosphere at the dinner was a good atmosphere," Speakes said.

He added: "The president's frame of mind is very good. He will sleep well tonight."
