southern country to work on our non-existent tans. (The sun doesn't shine very often in Holland.)

We also are planning a trip to the Soviet Union and will visit Berlin at the end of this term to study East-West relations for eight days.

Of all the different countries I've been to, however, I still prefer to study in Holland. The country is centrally located, making traveling to other places of interest (Paris, London, Copenhagen) much easier. In addition, the people here are great — very helpful and friendly (and most of them speak English).

Another attractive aspect of studying in Holland is the relatively inexpensive cost of living. On the average, things cost about half as much here as in the United States. This makes the student budget go much further when it comes to buying study-break necessities such as Heineken (about $5 a case).

I hope I have given some indication of what overseas study in the Netherlands has been like for us (so far). Last year when I was considering possible exchange programs, I had no idea that I'd be here right now or that I would have enjoyed myself as much as I have in the past five months. But even though I feel fortunate in being here at Nijenrode studying business, I think it's the change from typical university life and not just the specifics of the program that I value so much.

IFC releases money for van

The Incidental Fee Committee last week approved the release of $13,470 from an ASUO reserve account for the purchase of the first van for the ASUO Rape Prevention Project.

Earlier, the committee had agreed to put $22,000 in reserve for the purchase of two shuttle vans. The committee added a stipulation that one of the two vans be accessible to handicapped students.

IFC Chair James Randall requested an interpretation from the ASUO Constitution Court as to whether the Rape Prevention Project violates a section of the ASUO constitution that says activities supported by mandatory student fees shall not be denied on the basis of sex. The shuttle vans are for the exclusive use of women on campus, and some members of the IFC have charged that the project is discriminatory.

The projected income from student fees for the 1986-87 school year was set at $2,779,605 by Ralph Sunderland, budget director, last week. During the first week of IFC budget hearings this term, $26,145 was allocated to various programs.

In early budget hearings last term, $4,618 was allocated, leaving the committee a total of $2,748,842. The budgeting process started last week and is expected to continue through April.

Other budgets approved last week were: Amazon Community Tenants Council — $1,801; Solar Energy Center — $1,269; Reperatory Dancers — $3,669; Amazon Cooperative Childcare-Care Center — $11,994; People and the Oregon Coast — $693; Minority Law Student Association — $2,460; Chinese Student Association — $3,896; and the Undergraduate Economic Association — $363.
