Exchanges, other programs open for the disabled abroad

By Kirsten Bolin
Of the Emerald

International travel and the disabled will be the subject of a lecture today by a representative from a worldwide organization created to expand and improve the international travel opportunities of disabled persons.

Mary Boomer, from Mobility International U.S.A., will discuss upcoming travel exchanges and other organization activities during her lecture at 3:30 p.m. in the EMU Forum Room. The discussion is sponsored by the University International Studies Association.

Mobility International was established in England in 1973 to help address barriers disabled people encounter when they travel, says Dianna Rodgers, of Mobility International's U.S. chapter located in Eugene.

The Eugene chapter, the only one in the United States, was established in 1981, and Mobility International has chapters located in countries around the world.

The Eugene chapter was established after some local residents became interested in the organization and learned the United States did not have a national chapter, Rodgers says.

Mobility International members learn about travel opportunities through the organization's newsletter. The publication contains valuable information for disabled travelers, such as listings of wheelchair accessible hotels in various countries and news of tours planned for disabled persons, she says.

The organization is currently looking for people interested in participating in exchanges with Costa Rica, July 30 through August 28, and with England, late June through mid-July, she says.

Costa Ricans coming to the United States for the exchange will be placed in jobs at various local organizations, she says. Possible places of employment include the sight rehabilitation center at Sacred Heart hospital and the pool at Easter Seals School.

Last summer, 12 teenagers from England came to Eugene through Mobility International and worked with the U.S. Forest Service in making a local campground wheelchair accessible, she says.
