"It would be hard not to like ODC/San Francisco"

-ting 'em up there and building a great big city.

After touring Europe in 1984, Dan returned to Eugene and worked with local musicians Don Jordan and Jim Long as a bluegrass group, playing the streets and the Saturday Market. Last spring, Dan took up with Eagle Park Slim, with whom he plays today.

"Slim's got the big beat. We're talking about world-class music. I wish I could take him to Europe, but I can't even get him to get his passport, or even his birth certificate. If he went to Europe, he'd be an icon. We're going to Canada for Expo '86."

How did Dan come to play washtub bass?

"I noticed that on the street, there wasn't anybody getting the bass sound, so I started washtub because that was the easiest bass to play. It's only got one string..."

"I have progressed to bass-drum bass. The instrument I use on the street now has a bass drum in place of the washtub. The trip with bass-drum bass is finesse, just more finesse, more volume and tone, than the washtub has. It's a real good bottom; I can get the bottom with Slim any time.

"I want to go back to Europe. I've got a couple of German friends, Jorg and Harry, who play guitar and bass. Germans are always great guitar players, but they always sing soft. So I'm going to sing. I want to open up a Tex-Mex restaurant and cabaret in Paris. I'd love to have Emmylou Harris come in every time she's in Paris."

Eagle Park Slim and Doctor Dan can be heard every week at Arnold's Hideaway, 1461 1/2 E. 19th Ave., or in front of the Bookstore. The duo also play at local high schools, which helps to prove that for these two, there is no generation gap. Their music keeps them young.
