

HAVING HEALTH INSURANCE PROBLEMS?

Last year, the ASUO successfully assumed the administration of student health insurance. ASUO then awarded the contract to Lone Star Insurance, which had never handled student insurance before. Since ASUO's action last year, many U of O students now report the following:

- Claims paid months late, forcing students to pay their own medical bills until Lone Star decides, if ever, to pay them as contracted.
- Claims paid in amounts less than 80% of the full medical charges, forcing students to pay the unpaid balance themselves.
- Little or no help from the ASUO Insurance Coordinator, who, instead of acting as liaison between students and Lone Star, instead tells us to call the insurance company ourselves to argue with them about their unfair practices.

If you feel ripped off by Lone Star and are fed up with ASUO's mismanagement of the situation, you aren't alone. To vindicate our rights as insurance consumers, call the ASUO Office of Student Advocacy at 686-3722 for information and assistance. Together we can make ASUO and Lone Star accountable to student consumers!

Rally

Commentator staff members also used the rally as an opportunity to announce the management for the 1986-87 school year. In addition to Dungannon's selection as executive editor, Eden Godbey was named managing editor.

The paper will focus more on campus issues and activities next year, Dungannon said.

"This year's stuff went over peoples' heads," he said. He hopes to print more "apolitical" articles next year.

"We hope to attract more attention with the paper and, in the process, get our political views across," Dungannon said.

Eden Godbey, who served as associate editor this year, is the only female on the Commentator staff. She said the criticism about the paper being "sexist" is untrue.

"I'm living proof that there isn't sexism on the paper. I work on an equal basis with all the staff," she said.
