

hard charging moves, and crisp, precise passing. Both defenses were playing with reckless abandon in hopes of gaining an advantage. Neither team could break away and the game moved into overtime. Oregon had the disc first in the sudden death overtime, only to lose the disc on a bobbled throw. It looked bleak, but a diving block followed by a fast break score, sealed the Oregon victory, 20-19. The first day results left a jumble at the top of Pool A.

with four team at 2-1, and pre-tourney favorite Cornell at 1-2. In Pool B, Stanford and UMass pounded the competition to take command of the top two spots. The second day was crucial for Oregon. Because of the opening loss to Carnegie-Mellon, the Ducks had to win both games of the day against Cornell and Kansas. Once again Oregon was plagued by a slow start and never found their rhythm as Cornell rolled to victory, 17-8. This was a disheartening loss for Oregon. Even with a victory in the final game against Kansas, the Ducks had no chance because the best they could do would be to tie Cornell, but the Cornell victory over the Ducks would break the tie and send Cornell into the semi-finals. The final game was one of pride for Oregon. Oregon powered to pound Kansas, 17-12. The Ducks fifth-place finish capped the 1986 season as the most successful in Oregon ultimate history.
