

Workshops teach students how to be effective leaders

The students of today are the leaders of tomorrow, and several leadership workshops are offered at the University for students who wish to sharpen their skills and receive additional training.

The workshops are for people in charge of student organizations or any student who is interested, said Dr. Frank Geltner, associate director of the EMU, who runs the workshops.

"I decided to invest the same time in workshops as I had for classes," Geltner said. The classes are free and are not offered for credit so that as many students as possible can attend, Geltner said.

The workshops are offered every Thursday from 4 to 6 p.m., and each deals with a different facet of leadership, Geltner said. The workshop offerred on Thursday, "In Search of Excellence," is generally one of the most exciting, he said.

The workshop started with an 88-minute program based on a video produced by Tom Peters, author of "In Search of Excellence."

Viewers were taken through eight scenarios concerning how companies such as Disney, Apple, IBM and McDonalds achieved excellence in the working world, he said.

Students are able to relate to the workshops because they are shown what kind of skills are needed to reach excellence in the working world, he said.

To attend the workshops, students are encouraged but not required to sign up in the Student Activities Resource Office, Suite 2, EMU.

Future leadership workshops include "Passion for Excellence" on Thursday, "Situational Leadership II" on Nov. 13, and "A New Look at Motivation" on Nov. 20.

Foundation promotes excellence in students

The Student Activities Resource Office (SARO) and members of the community are working together to promote excellence among college students.

The 1440 Foundation, a local non-profit, tax-exempt group whose goal is to perpetuate excellence in people, is an organizer of the "Celebrate Excellence 1986" program.

The foundation is working with the University to promote student leadership and personal excellence, said President Gary McNaught.

"Celebrate Excellence 1986" is in the second year of a three-year program designed to encourage companies to recognize excellence and bring in new ideas from the outside to generate creativity, McNaught said.

One way this can be achieved is through college students, he said.

"We've been trying to develop a liaison with the University," McNaught said. "The future of our community rests with how well we retain student leaders from high school and college," he said.

McNaught hopes to project a positive image of the Eugene/Springfield area to students, so that they consider staying in the area and contributing to its growth, he said.

"If this community loses its best high school and college students, you have to recruit them... then you have a declining area," McNaught said.

As part of the program, Drs. Ken and Marge Blanchard, the developers of the "One Minute Manager" series, will be speaking at the Hult Center Tuesday.

The speakers were chosen because the couple has achieved excellence as speakers, authors and business owners, McNaught said.

Tickets for the event, which runs from 8:30 a.m. to noon, are $45. However, the 1440 Foundation will be supplying about 100 free tickets to the event for interested college students, McNaught said.

Tickets can be picked up at the SARO, Suite 2, EMU, until the day of the event, said Dr. Frank Geltner, associate director of the EMU.

For 25 Years, we've been exporting America's most valuable resource.

The men and women of the Peace Corps. Dedicated volunteers who help people in developing countries live better lives.

It's tough. And it takes more than just concern. It takes motivation. Commitment.

But for 25 years, being a Peace Corps volunteer has been a chance to stop dreaming about a better world and start doing something about it.
