Volleyball team whips Cal; Stanford halts win streak

By Craig Harris
Of the Emerald

Oregon's volleyball team received a trick the day after Halloween, when the Stanford Cardinal upended the Ducks in a four-game match, snapping their nine-game winning streak.

With the loss, the Ducks are now 9-4 in the Pacific-10 Conference and locked-up with Arizona State University for third place.

The Cardinal upped its record to 10-1 and now trails conference leader UCLA by one-half game.

Stanford buried Oregon 15-4 in game one, but the Ducks came back in the second stanza, winning 15-10.

In game three, Stanford produced a carbon copy of the first game, beating the Ducks handily, 15-3.

"In the third game Stanford's offense was much quicker and it gave our defense a lot of trouble," said Oregon coach Gerry Gregory. "We also had problems receiving serves."

That last remark was an understatement, for the Cardinal recorded 14 service aces, and the Ducks had fits all night with their return.

All-American setter Wendi Rush and junior Teresa Smith gave Oregon plenty of problems, as Rush chalked up five aces to go with her 54 assists, while Smith tallied four aces along with 15 kills.

The Ducks' one-two punch of Michele Krebsbach and Teri Kramer were shut down for most of the night, as they were held to only 11 and 16 kills, respectively.

In the fourth game, Stanford turned the lights out on Oregon, winning 15-6.

Even after losing to Stanford, ranked ninth (Tachikara QR CVCA) and 10th (NCAA) in the nation, Gregory was still pleased with his club's efforts.

"I'm not disappointed at all. We're in a tie for third with ASU and have a good chance of taking sole position of third. If we have a good finish we have a great chance to make the NCAA tournament and host a first round game," Gregory said.

Oregon is currently fifth in the west region, with the top eight teams going to the national tournament.

On Friday night, Oregon won its 17th match of the year by downing the California Golden Bears in four games.

The "K-Combination" of Krebsbach and Kramer were red hot, slamming home 28 and 34 kills, respectively.

After the weekend, Kramer had totaled up 557 kills for the year, and only needs 131 to break All-American Sue Harbour's record which was set in 1983.

Krebsbach has slammed down 506 kills for the season, the most ever as a freshman and fourth on the list of most kills in a year.

While Krebsbach and Kramer were heating up Oregon's offense, the rest of Harmon Gym was deathly cold. An estimated crowd of only 250 were in attendance, with 150 of those being the Oregon Marching Band, which was in Berkeley for the football game.

Even though the "K-Combination" was lighting up the scoreboard, Oregon still had trouble putting away the Bears.

Oregon won the first two games 15-12, and then rallied back in the third game only to fall 17-15. In that third game, the score was tied at 13, 14 and 15, before the Bears put it away.

Oregon then closed out the match in convincing fashion, winning game four 15-8.

Oregon will make another road trip next weekend, when it travels to Los Angeles to play the best and worst team in the conference. Friday, the Ducks will take on the 0-13 USC Trojans, and Saturday they will play 7th- (NCAA) and 8th- (Tachikara/CVCA) ranked UCLA.
