Do you think Democratic control of the Senate will affect President Reagan's policies?

'Yes because they (Democrats) will have more power. I think the more people that can take away power from Reagan, the better. I'm a Democrat.'

Mary Arthur, freshman, psychology

'There will be very little difference. I don't think very much will get through anyway. Minor shifts in power between the two parties are relatively insignificant. Major social change cannot occur within this bipartisan structure.'

Scott Senn, senior, sociology

'My personal opinion is yes. He (Reagan) will turn into a lame duck president. The fact is that the Democrats will... take away Reaganomics. I think he's really going to have a hard time.'

Taylor Lake, graduate, law

'There will be definite changes because he (Reagan) is virtually powerless now. It won't be as easy for him to push through sanctions.'

Sarah Murphy, freshman, psychology

'I don't see immediate effects, but there may be substantial effects on the upcoming elections. The Democrats will have more power, and the Republicans will have a hard time getting someone in the president's seat.'

Stewart Setchfield, junior, biology
