For the Ducks, their "Triple-K" combination of Teri Kramer, Michele Krebsbach and Lauri Krejcha turned out to be only one "K" — Krejcha.

Krejcha, playing one of her best matches on the season, chalked up 19 kills with a .548 hitting percentage and nine blocks.

The other two were frustrated by the Stanford defense all afternoon. Kramer was held to a .151 hitting percentage, while Krebsbach only put 10 kills down and had a -.029 percentage.

"It was really frustrating for Michele and I," Kramer said. "We tried all our shots, and nothing seemed to work. We just kept shooting, hoping something would happen."

Krebsbach had the same feeling.

"They put up a really good block and read us well," Krebsbach said.

This was exactly what Stanford coach Don Shaw had in mind.

"They are a good squad, but are real predictable. We disregarded a couple of their other players to key on Kramer and Krebsbach. Oregon doesn't set their offense enough to change the game plan," Shaw said.

"Our object was to get out on top and get the momentum — not to swing back and forth," Shaw said. "We wanted to take the crowd out of the match, and I think we did a good job of doing that."

In game one, it looked like the Ducks were going to get momentum to flow their way when Krejcha stuffed a Cardinal overpass to tie the score at five. But then the Cardinal went on a hot streak, outscoring the Ducks 7-1, and suddenly the "Pit" was deathly quiet.

Oregon then started a small rally with a pair of Stephanie Snyder and Krejcha blocks to cut the deficit 12-8. The Cardinal then came right back with a Fontana kill to get side out and promptly scored two more on a Brooke Hahner and Reno block and another Fontana kill.

Oregon then called for a timeout and managed to score once more, before Stanford took the game when Krebsbach's kill went wide.

In that first game Kramer recorded her 688th kill, passing All-American Sue Harbour's single season record set in 1983. Kramer's kill total for the day was 20, putting her season total to 703 — six more than her last two seasons combined.

In game two, the Ducks went up 6-3 on a Monica Camp block, but that was the last lead they would see in the game, as the Cardinal went on a tear to outscore the Ducks 12-1.

In game three, Fontana continued her arsenal on the Ducks, slamming down two kills to help put the Cardinal in front 4-0. Oregon then gained possession on a Krejcha kill and tied the game after four Stanford attack errors.

The Cardinal then went on another run, outscoring the hosts 6-2, to take a 10-6 lead. Possession then changed five times before the Ducks did something they hadn't done all afternoon — got on a hot streak.

Kramer and Tina Adolph scored a pair on service aces, and Krebsbach recorded a kill and a block to give the Ducks the first lead of the game, 11-10. After a Stanford timeout, the Ducks scored their final four on two Stanford errors, a Camp ace and a Stephanie Drier-Snyder block to get the win.

The momentum didn't carry into game four, though, as Stanford went ahead 9-3, before the Ducks were on the wrong end of a questionable call by the officials.
