

Financial Aid Forms to arrive as scheduled, despite changes

By Chris Norred

Student Financial Aid Forms will be available at the Office of Student Financial Aid next Monday, Dec. 15.

Previous reports had said the forms might arrive late this year because of changes required by the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act of 1965, signed into law by President Reagan earlier this fall.

But a commendable effort by the College Scholarship Service and The College Board, who print and organize the forms, completed the changes and sent the forms out with no significant delay, said Ed Vignoul, director of the University Office of Student Financial Aid.

There will be two major changes in student financial aid this year — in independency status and in the Guaranteed Student Loan program, Vignoul said.

"The independent student definition is becoming much more restrictive," Vignoul said, but he said specific differences are not fully clear yet.

He plans to attend a conference of financial aid administrators this week in California to clarify specific effects of the changes in the financial aid programs.

The GSL changes began Oct. 17, when Reagan signed the reauthorization bill.

GSL applicants now have to complete the same FAF required for recipients of grants and loans. Before this year, GSL applicants did not have to demonstrate need, as other FAF applicants do.

More specific information on the changes in the GSL program also will be available after the conference, Vignoul said.

During winter term registration, the financial aid office will set up a table outside the EMU

Ballroom to distribute FAFs, Vignoul said.

"It's important that students apply for financial aid during the month of January to meet the deadlines for all the programs," he said.
