Weber

"Nash responded well, and I think starting helped him," Monson said. "I thought Sprague came in and did the things that we need him to do."

The Ducks played well as a team, but the athletic finesse of Taylor simply stole the show.

Taylor hit 14 of 22 against Weber State for 63.6 percent, an improvement over his 44 percent statistic throughout the Ducks' first three games.

Weber State head coach Larry Farmer, whose team dropped to 1-4 with the loss, had nothing but praise for Oregon's stand-out: "We ran big-guard, small-guard defense at times and tried to deny him (Taylor) the ball. He made some very difficult shots that no other player would have made."

Monson was, understandably, also pleased with his catalyst's performance.

"Taylor had another great game," Monson said. "He is tough to handle if you let him in the open court like he got (against Weber State)."
