Oregon Continued from Page 12

much concentration and intensity," said Oregon head coach Don Monson, whose team won its third straight game. "We were a half count behind everything."

But Monson was by no means denouncing Seattle-Pacific's effort.

"You've got to give them (Seattle-Pacific) credit," Monson said. "Their kids played hard and patiently... I'm sure this was the best ball game they've played."

Meyer was also impressed with the Falcons' play: "We were really careful not to say they're just Division II and take them lightly."

Taylor admitted that Seattle-Pacific "out-worked us in the first half."

But the Ducks got down to business and came out after intermission to hit 63 percent of their shots from the field and play "more spirited," according to Monson.

Most of Oregon's spirit came from Taylor and Meyer, who were the catalysts in the second half, scoring 34 of the Ducks' 49 points.

Taylor scored a career-high 34 points that night, including 20 in the second half on seven of nine from the field. He finished the game 12 of 20 and nine of 10 from the line.

Taylor not only primed the Ducks' offensive attack, but battled under the boards at the other end for 11 rebounds, also a career best.

"I wasn't taking off on the break as much," Taylor said of his rebounding success. "I he'd back a little more because they were taking the lane away on the break."

Meyer, who has been struggling offensively since his season-opening 26 points against Montana, ignited for a 20-point performance against the Falcons. He was eight of 11 from the field, including five of six in the second half, and four of six from the free-throw line.

Meyer tossed in three points. Taylor added four and forward Jesse Nash cashed in on a David Girley assist off the break, as Oregon outscored Seattle-Pacific 10-1 during a four minute span late in the second half to all but seal the victory.

The Ducks registered their largest lead of the night when Keith Balderston scored after rebounding his own miss to put the hosts up, 81-60, with 1:49 remaining.

Oregon outrebounded Seattle-Pacific 43-28. In addition to Taylor's 11 rebounds, forward Nash pulled down nine boards and Meyer grabbed seven.

The victory boosted the Ducks' record to 4-2, their best start since 1980. Seattle-Pacific fell to 2-2 on the season.

Oregon will depart from its schedule this week before opening its Pac-10 schedule on the road Dec. 21 at Stanford. The Ducks then play the University of California at Berkeley Dec. 23 to round out their Bay area swing.

The Ducks will spend their holidays in Portland Coliseum when they compete in the Fred Meyer Far West Classic.

Oregon plays Southwestern Louisiana in its first game at 7:05 p.m. Dec. 26.

Other teams in the Classic field are: the University of Idaho, Louisiana Tech, Mississippi State University, Oregon State University, San Jose State University and the University of Washington.
