What do you think of Gov. Neil Goldschmidt's merit-based scholarship program?

'I think it's a really good idea because I've had trouble getting aid because my parents make too much money. I think financially needy people get a lot.'

— Caryn Schock, junior, Japanese

'I think the quality of the institution should be stressed more than giving money to deserving students.'

— Doug Weaver, graduate student, interdisciplinary studies

'I would go to a better school with a better name without financial need in mind. It just depends on your personal philosophy.'

— Emily Daniels, graduate student, environmental studies

'It works against the poor... you have a situation where a person can't pay for a college education... because they haven't had the same opportunities. It's going to exclude a lot of people who need the opportunity.'

— Nick Beres, senior, journalism

'I think it's good because a lot of people have parents who are wealthy, but they don't get any money.'

— Sabrina Mauer, freshman, undeclared

'I think it's good because all scholarships are now financial need. This way the smartest (students) will stay in Oregon.'

— Terri Tobin, freshman, health
