Ducks host Huskies tonight

By Capi Lynn
 Of the Emerald

Oregon coach Don Monson and the men's basketball team will be looking to regain some confidence when they begin a string of four consecutive home games at McArthur Court, hosting the University of Washington tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The Ducks are in the midst of a three-game losing streak, their longest of the season, suffering recent defeats to Oregon State University, UCLA and USC on the road.

Although unable to register a win, Oregon played tough in all three games. The Ducks had the lead in the second half against both OSU and UCLA and were within reaching distance of USC with less than five minutes to play, but all to no avail.

The Ducks, 8-8 overall and 2-5 in the Pac-10, now have those and two other conference road losses behind them and better things to look forward to at Mac Court.

Oregon will now enjoy a string of seven in nine outings in Mac Court beginning tonight with the Huskies. The return home is a welcome one for the Ducks as they have a five-game win streak in "the Pit" and are 5-1 on the season at home, losing only their opener to Idaho State University.

But the Ducks will not have an easy task tonight, confronting what coach Monson considers probably the best balanced team in the conference.

The Huskies, 10-7 on the season and 4-2 in conference play, feature center Chris Welp, the teams' leading scorer and rebounder. Welp, who was the recipient of the Pac-10 Player of the Year award last season, is averaging 21.4 points and 9.1 rebounds a game.

With Washington's possible size advantage, Monson is expected to stick with the most recent lineup used on the Los Angeles trip. Abandoning the Ducks' three-guard alignment, Monson replaced guard Rick Osborn with forward Jesse Nash, who started four games in December.

Nash responded well after re-entering the starting lineup. He scored 16 points and grabbed 15 rebounds in southern California, including a career-high 14 against USC.

Weary Ducks hit the road again

By Dennis Fernandes
 Of the Emerald

The Oregon Ducks continue an arduous stretch of games when they resume Pacific-10 Conference play this weekend in a game against Washington State University in Pullman Thursday night and the University of Washington in Seattle

Saturday night.

Coach Elwin Heiny and his squad, now 3-2 in Pac-10 play and 10-4 overall, feels they have a lot to prove after following two losses in Los Angeles with a sloppy 79-70 win at home over the University of Portland Monday night. Part of the problem, however, can be attributed to scheduling: next Tuesday's counter at Portland State University will mark Oregon's sixth game in 13 days, five of those on the road.

"It's been very difficult to practice and maintain our conditioning when we're on the road constantly," Heiny said of his road-weary Ducks. "Some of the players are still frustrated and down in the dumps; others are anxious to prove we're a better team than what we just showed our fans," he added.

Oregon's frantic schedule will not have let up when they take on the 7-7 Cougars Thursday. WSU has struggled since winning their first five games of the year and are winless in five tries against Pac-10 rivals. The Ducks own a 13-game winning streak over the Cougars.

The pivotal matchup will come Saturday against the Huskies, who are a half-game out of first place at 4-1 (12-3 overall). Washington is ranked 23rd in the nation this week by USA Today, and there's no doubt why.

Heiny ranks the Husky defense right up there with Oregon State University's, and they are outrebounding their opponents by an amazing 13-board margin a contest.

The Huskies won 10 in a row before losing to Arizona State University last Thursday, 78-64, in Tempe.

"We went into last weekend's games thinking 'Let's play our game and see what happens,'"
