

Vandals take EMU artwork, damage public telephones

Four works of art were stolen and several telephones damaged in a recent attack by vandals on the EMU.

The works of art, estimated to have a combined value of $1000, were stolen on different occasions beginning last week, said Frank Geltner, EMU director.

The first piece stolen was located in the lobby of the ballroom. It was a lynx cut depicting "a very, brightly colored peacock," Geltner said. The work was titled "Thistle Solitaire".

Geltner believes the work was stolen the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 20.

The second piece discovered missing was another lynx cut called "Bull Series Number 15," also located in the lobby of the ballroom. This was believed to be stolen on Friday, Jan. 23.

Also, over the weekend a wall hanging from the art gallery on the second floor was stolen, as was a lithograph entitled "I couldn't say" which hung outside the GALA office on the third floor of the EMU.

All the works, except for the wall hanging, had been attached to the wall by security bolts which were destroyed during the theft. However, on the same day the art was stolen from the ballroom, vandals unsuccessfully tried to remove a painting in the Gumwood Room. The painting was secured by a different type of bolt, Geltner said. On that day the stage clock from the ballroom was stolen and almost every phone in the building was damaged, Geltner said.
