The Tennessee Kid

When Jesse Winchester ambles on stage with guitar in hand, the audience can expect a captively original performance. First brought into the limelight in the late '60s, with help on his first album from legendary Robbie Robertson of The Band, the native Tennessean quickly established himself as an innovative and much acclaimed artist. He has released six albums to date on Warner Brothers/Bearsville Records. Winchester will appear at the Community Center for the Performing Arts, February 11th at 8 p.m., in a solo acoustic show. Greg Brown, a former star of "A Prairie Home Companion" and a performer at the 1985 Newport Folk Festival, will also perform an acoustic show.

Kernels

Delinquency

A recent study shows that juvenile delinquency may be caused by an iron deficiency. The University of Minnesota researchers recommend routine screening of juveniles in detention for blood-iron levels and appropriate supplementation.

Miles of Books

The Library of Congress currently houses almost 80 million items stored on 532 miles of shelves. Ten new items are acquired every minute.

Sexual Abuse

Teachers were advised not to touch their students in any way in a memo by the superintendent of an Illinois school district. Even pats on the back are suspect because, the memo read, "real and imagined sexual abuse Spectrum magazine cases against a couple of our employees have made us realize the mood of parents today."

Propaganda

An education professor at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, has proposed that an interdisciplinary study be made of propaganda in high school English and social studies curricula. "To achieve the goal of preparation for citizenship, the study of mass media propaganda is essential in a democratic society where voters and consumers are required to make rational choices in the political and economic marketplace," he says.

Party School

Playboy magazine has designated California State University at Chico the country's top party school last year.

That ranking was based on interviews with more than 250 "socially active" students at 40 colleges throughout the United States.

Stressful Knowledge

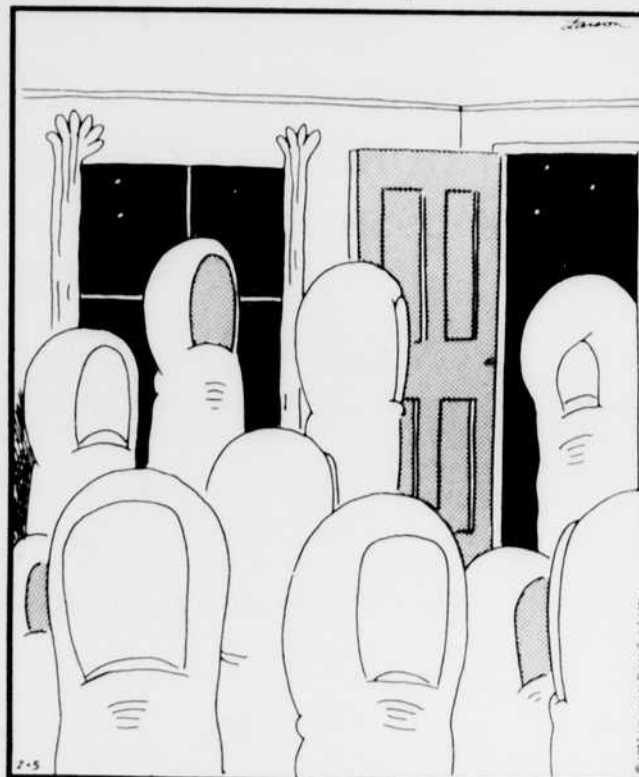

Research conducted at the UCLA School of Nursing indicates that heart patients whose family members had been taught cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) had much higher anxiety and depression levels than those whose relatives hadn't.

STDs

Chlamydia now is considered the most prevalent sexually transmitted disease, claiming 3 to 10 million victims each year. If left untreated, it can cause pelvic inflammatory disease and eventually infertility.

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

Suddenly, everyone turned and looked — there, standing in the doorway, was one wretched, mean-looking ingrown.
