

Local library lends tools

Where can you borrow anything from a lawn mower to a belt sander? If you're a member of the Eugene Tool Library, the answer is a small building at the end of Sycamore Street in north Eugene.

The Eugene Tool Library is a non-profit organization run by volunteers. Members pay $15 per year and have access to a wide variety of household maintenance and gardening tools.

A weekly fee, between $1 and $2, is charged for use of the power tools and garden machinery to keep them in repair.

Anyone can join the Eugene Tool Library. "I wish more people knew about it, it could help many more people than we have now," said Gayle Horwitz, an active member in the organization.

"One of the original goals of the program was to help lower-income people improve their houses and gardens," said Curt Yoder, a volunteer at the tool library. The library was started in 1976 from a federal grant. After a few years, lack of participation shut it down. It was started up again in 1982 and is affiliated with the Whiteaker Community Council.

But according to Horwitz, the tool library hopes to eventually become independent and stand as a non-profit organization on its own. This would make it easier for the tool library to obtain grants.

The University's tool library closed down last year for reorganization.

The Eugene Tool Library is located on the River House grounds at 807 Sycamore St., off the end of North Adams St. It is open Tuesdays between 5 and 7 p.m. and Saturdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. There are plans to maintain longer hours this spring. For more information, call 485-3075.

438 demonstrators. All of them pleaded not guilty, using the Nuremberg Treaty as a defense.

Drawn up in the context of the Holocaust, the treaty gives citizens the right to resist any government action that will result in massive loss of civilian life. But the Nye County district attorney called the strategy "ridiculous."

Outside the "jail," I asked Sheen whom he thought should move into the White House in 1988. "I don't think any of them are worth anything," replied the actor. However, "If word gets out, and enough people do this, it might be seized upon as a campaign issue," he added.

The release from jail marked a temporary end to the demonstration. In the spring most of the students who were arrested will return to Nevada to serve sentences of between two and five days, depending on whether they are first offenders. The defense is not expected to work.

"The sacrifices I have made are minor compared to the sacrifices made by other political activists in the past," said Teigin, who said she plans to return to Nevada for a jail term in spring or summer.
