Civil War disappointment

Ducks lose shocker to OSU, 64-63

By Capi Lynn

Of the Emerald
 Thursday night's Civil War basketball game was a disheartening one to say the least — a game that should have gone the other way.

The Oregon Ducks suffered a heartbreaking 64-63 Pacific 10 Conference loss to Oregon State University in McArthur Court, their first loss in "the Pit" after nine consecutive victories.

The outcome of the game could very well be called a fluke of sorts.

The Ducks led the entire game up until OSU forward Bill Sherwood swished a three-point shot with two seconds remaining. Oregon frantically called a timeout, but with just one second showing on the clock, the game was history.

Oregon coach Don Monson and his players were left stunned and frustrated with the outcome.

"The outcome surely was tough to take," said Monson, whose team dropped to 13-10 overall and 7-7 in the Pac-10. "My kids played hard, and they played emotionally."

OSU was able to win the game primarily because of the three-point shot — something Monson has been against ever since it was put into effect.

The Beavers drilled three three-pointers in the final 38 seconds of the game to claw their way back from an eight-point deficit and elevate their record to 18-4 overall and 10-3 in the conference.

Just when Anthony Taylor had slammed home two points on a breakaway to give the Ducks a 63-55 lead and bring the 10,099 fans to their feet to rock "the Pit," OSU turned to the three-point weapon feared by Monson.

OSU's Eric Knox canned a 20-footer to pull the Beavers within five, 63-58.

The Beavers then sent David Girley to the free throw line, where he missed the front end of a one-and-one opportunity.

OSU came right back down the floor, and Knox hit another three-pointer — this time a sloppy bank shot — to cut the advantage to a field goal.
