

be inadequately funded," he said.

Van Houten has published 26 professional articles and books dealing with the economy, management and labor relations.

His articles have been published in Administrative Science Quarterly, Economic and Industrial Democracy and Work and Occupations.

The college of arts and sciences, the largest school at the University, generates 60 percent of all credit hours at the University, Hill said.

Because of the University's graduation requirements, the college's curriculum touches every undergraduate at the University, he added.

The college of arts and sciences covers all the basic disciplines in the University except the professional schools and accounts for 45 percent of the academic affairs budget, he said.

sizable profit from a condo conversion when the market is favorable, and thus the fallout on tenants is a legitimate expense for the developer to pick up, Schue said.

About 24 senior citizens attended Wednesday's work session and seemed pleased with the results.

"What I see now is very obviously a progressive city council willing to take a closer look at this modification, looking at the recommendations from the Planning Commission as well as the testimony given at the public hearing," said Ben Taitel, president of the Commission on the Rights of the Aging.
