What do you think about a mandatory seat belt law in Oregon?

'I don't like it myself. I wear my seat belt, but I don't think the state has the right to say that you have to wear one. People will wear seat belts if they want to. And even if the law is passed, there is not that much the state can do to enforce it.'

— Lisa Reager, freshman, undeclared

'I think it is a good law in principle, but it is going to take a lot to enforce. There are still a lot of people out there afraid of being trapped in a car, so a lot of studies will have to be done to see how people feel. I don't think the public is convinced that if they are trapped in a car a seat will help them out.'

— Michael Makio, senior, architecture

'I really think that if people want to take a personal risk while driving their car, I don't see how anyone can pass a law against it.'

— Bob Wallin, senior, geology

'I think it is a good idea, especially because they already have it in California. My roommate and I got hit awhile ago, and we didn't have our seat belts on. I'll always wear a belt now.'

— Kim Hampton, senior, psychology

'I guess it is OK, but I think they should keep it for ages 16 and under because smaller kids can fly around easier than adults — also because as a person becomes older, they become more responsible and should be allowed to do as they want and what they feel is best for them.'

— Michael Warren, sophomore, business administration

'I think it is a great idea. I come from a state that already has the law (Ohio), and in the first month that it was enforced it cut down on the number of deaths by a tremendous amount.'

— Lisa Verch, freshman, journalism
