Men's golf team looking strong

By Dan Goulet and Marv Hoffman

Of the Emerald

After only one tournament in four months, the University men's golf team will get back into the swing of things March 23-24, when they take on a 15-team field in the Pepsi/Northern California Intercollegiate tournament in Stockton, Calif.

The Ducks, ranked 19th nationally, are defending champions and one of the favorites, along with Fresno State University, to win the tournament.

"We have an excellent chance to win it," said golf coach Scott Krieger. "We're defending champions and Fresno State won the PCAA (Pacific Coast Athletic Association) on this course last year... I guess we're both defending champions."

Australian junior Steve Rintoul will lead the Ducks in Stockton. Rintoul, an All-American candidate, had the best single-round score (70) at the Pacific 10 Conference tournament last year and tied for seventh overall.

Joining him will be teammates Rob Huff, a senior from Boise, Idaho; Tony Joyner, a senior from Medford; and Tim Hval and Chris Holzgang, both sophomores from Beaverton.

Along with Fresno State, the Ducks must exhibit a strong showing against the remaining field if they want to gain leverage in the NCAA championships.

"Anytime you're in a tournament with a lot of teams in your area, it has an effect on the NCAA qualifying," Krieger said. "We need to beat a lot of teams. It would help us a lot if we could beat Long Beach, San Jose State and Pacific."

The Elkhorn Country Club course layout in Stockton will challenge all golfers. It's short and tight with little room for error.

In just a little over three years, Krieger has guided the Ducks to two consecutive runner-up finishes in the Pac-10; eight tournament titles; 10 top-10 tournament placings; and a bid to last year's NCAA championships, where Oregon finished 18th.

Krieger also collected Pac-10 Coach of the Year honors for himself in 1984-85.

What more could a coach want? Krieger wants a Pac-10 title and thinks the Ducks could get it since the Pac-10 Championships will be played in Oregon's backyard at the Eugene Country Club.

"We'd like to win our conference, and I think we have a good shot on our home course," he said. "This might be the edge that puts us over the top."

A home course may help, but any hopes of a Pac-10 championship rest with team performance.

"Last year we had more depth, but this year we're stronger in the first five positions, and considering we're playing five and six-man tournaments, that's better," Krieger said.

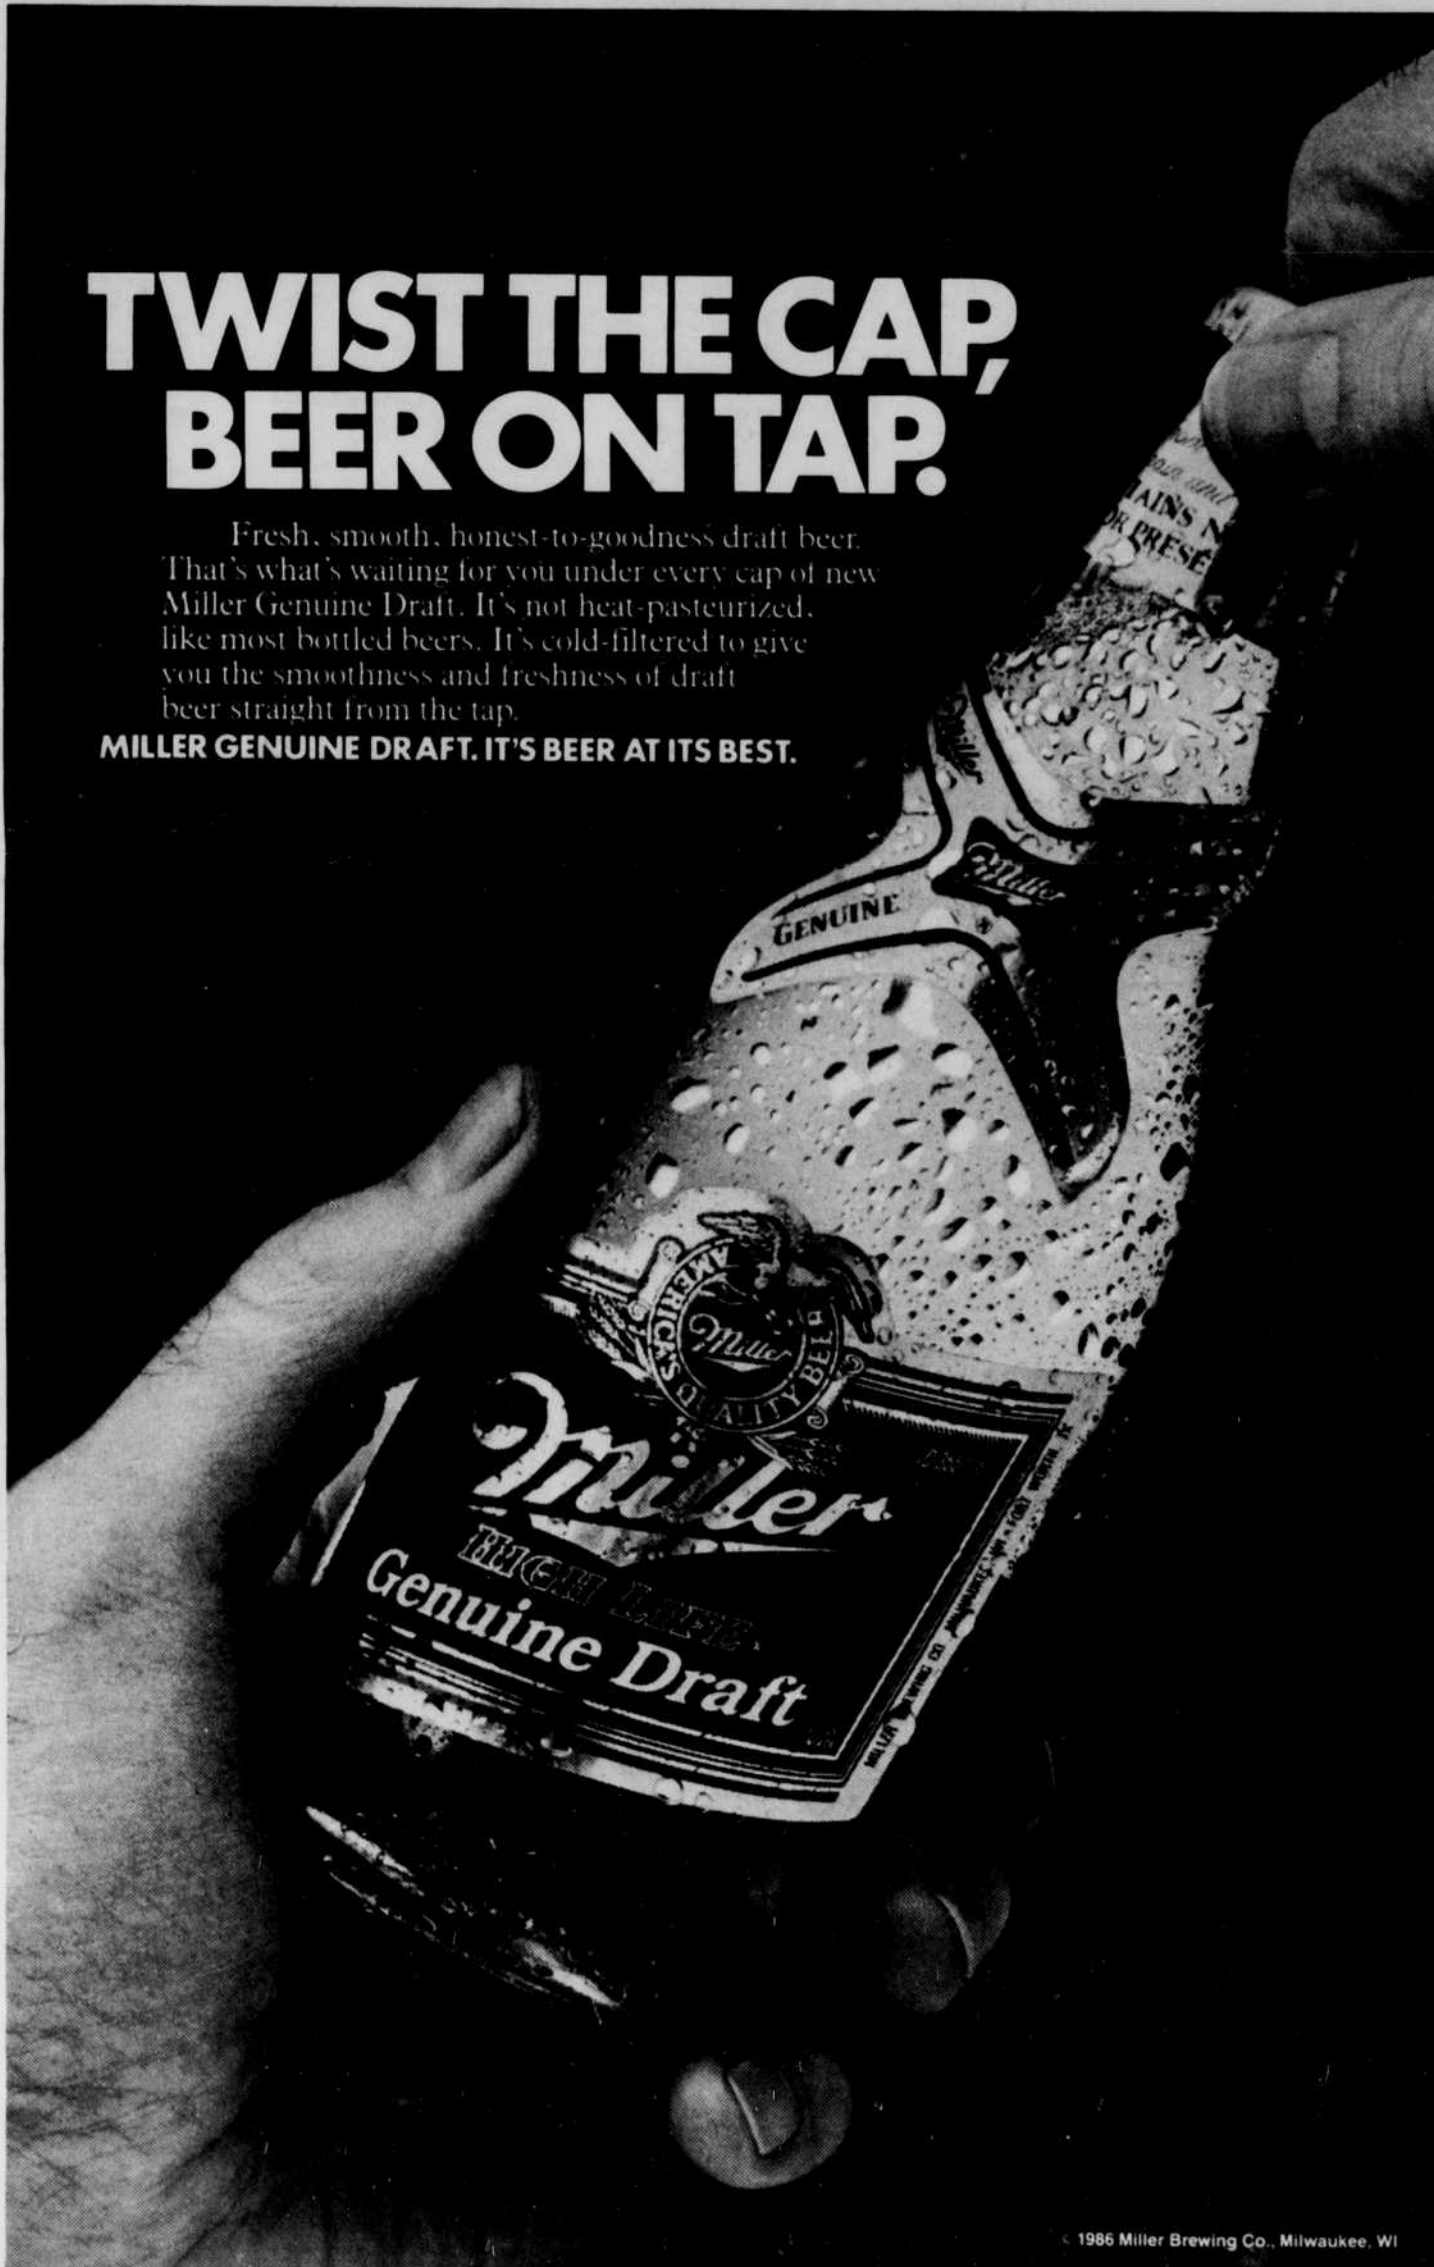

"I think this is the best team we've had here in my three years. They've worked hard," he said.

Hopefully that hard work will begin paying off on the fairways and greens in Stockton over Spring Break.
