

Estupido said. The desire is usually triggered by an individual's fifth consecutive night of taking bong hits, especially if the happy hemp is native to El Salvador, he said.

"It also is where the genetically inbred desire to really foul things up kicks into gear as well," he added.

Dr. Flak 'n Stall credits some of these foul ups, bleeps and blunders to the fact that genetically created politicians are severely paranoid.

"They don't trust anyone," Stall said. "The press, the administration, the students, no one."

Stall said this was especially true of ASUO presidents.

'It involves a lot of weird things with genes, sperm, ovum and icky things like that.'

— Dr. Yawn Mostly

"Slime 'I want to be Billy Wils' Noson is a prime example of this," he said. "When Mostly, Estupido and I were interviewing him, his shifty eyes were constantly in motion. When we mentioned things like his protest at the University of El Salvador, the infamous health insurance program and other ASUO mishaps, he put on this smarmy smile and began speaking in doublespeak."

Mostly stressed the genetic creation of ASUO officials has, for the most part, been relatively harmless. There are two experiments that worry him, however, he said.

"It seems the genetic scientists at the lab were trying to create a set of twins to get involved in the Incidentally Feeless Conflict. Well there was a foul up," he said. "Instead of creating two like-minded and like-bodied IFC members, two diametrically opposed creations emerged: Run Munchkin and Bald Nowin.

The second experiment also dealt with twins, Mostly said. Only this one went more right than the other, he said.

"In a second attempt to create twins, there was yet another mix up. One of the twins, Slime Noson, turned into a perfect SRA machine politician. The other Flat Stanley Noson went on to become a writer for the Immorald. Figure that one out," Mostly said.

a telephone interview.

The interview was taped when Belson called the Immorald office threatening to force his organization's point of view on administration officials he claimed to have taken hostage if the Immorald did not become enlightened and surrender within 24 hours.

"Why can't you guys just print good stuff about us in the paper. After all, 15 percent of your funding comes from inconsequential fees, and since we're student government I think we should be able to have you guys print whatever we say you should," he said.

When Belson was reminded of the First Amendment, which had to be explained to him as the amendment dealing with freedom of the press, he became flustered and infuriated and screamed, "If you ain't progressive, you ain't shit," before slamming down the phone.

polyester would be stopped at the door by campus security.

"We just think the public should follow our example and become more like us," Rugburn said. "And what better way to start than with polyester."

According to informed sources, department officials also are discussing ways to test athletes for polyester use.

Rugburn would not comment on the testing proposal.
