"Last year we dodged the bullet," said Oregon coach Tom Heinonen, referring to the fateful 400-meter relay, in which both teams dropped the baton and the Ducks recovered to win the race and clinch the meet, 70-65. "We won on the strength of freak occurrence."

Saturday's dual meet may not turn out to be as bizarre, but nevertheless Heinonen predicts a highly competitive contest. "It was a really exciting meet last year, and it will be this year, too," he said. "Every event is going to count."

According to Heinonen, WSU is extremely strong in the throws and sprints.

Parity may exist in much of the track meet, but the Ducks have a distinct advantage in the distance races. The Cougars, who have never beaten Oregon in eight tries, haven't much to offer beyond 800-meter runner Celestine N'Drin (2:07.89). Meanwhile, Colleen Quam of Oregon is coming off her best race of the season (2:09.52), and Francie Faure, who ran the 1500 last week, returns to the 800, her specialty.

"I think we can even the score out in the distances," explained Heinonen. Oregon's Penny Graves and Liz Wilson give the Ducks a solid edge in the 1,500 meters and may make the difference in the meet. "Penny and Liz will double in the 3,000 if we need them to," he said.
