Travel

sive way for travelers to get around Europe. The pass offers unlimited first- and second-class travel among 16 countries. The 1986 price for a Eurail Pass was $260 for 15 days, $330 for 21 days, $410 for a month and $560 for two months. A youth Eurail pass allows unlimited second class travel for children.

One thing to remember when traveling in Europe is that because of the recent wave of terrorism in France an American citizen must now obtain a visa before entering that country.

Closer to home, Mexico and Hawaii are viable options for students wishing to travel.

Airplane tickets to Hawaii from Portland run about $300; however, some mid-week seats from San Francisco are closer to $200. In Honolulu a person can get lodging for as little as $25 a night.

While it may be a bit hot and humid in the summer, Mexico is probably one of the least expensive travel bargains.

For many travelers the Parthenon is the main attraction while visiting Greece.
