IFC elects summer board officers, appoints funds to child-care center

The Incidental Fee Committee on Tuesday elected officers for its summer board.

Committee member Bob Baldwin was elected unanimously for the summer chairman position. However, he was elected only after dealing with a technicality.

IFC rules state there must be a quorum of seven members, the entire committee, to elect officials. Committee member Laurie Clark was absent, and the committee voted unanimously to suspend that rule and allow the voting with only six members.

Baldwin has served as chairman pro tem for the first two meetings of the newly elected IFC and is currently in his second year on the committee.

He was elected to serve as last summer's chairman but was removed when committee members voted to reconsider their voting on committee chairman, vice chairman and the two EMU Board representatives.

The committee decided to wait until the ASUO Executive had filled a vacant seat before reconsidering.

The committee also unanimously elected Sandra Thompson as vice chairwoman for the summer. Thompson is beginning her first year on the IFC.

Baldwin and Thompson also were unanimously elected to represent the IFC on the summer EMU Board.

Armando Morales completes the three-person summer committee, although committee members J.B. Leahy and Steve Hoyt indicated they would attend meetings when possible.

The committee also unanimously voted on two budget line-item transfers for the Amazon Child Care Center. The IFC transferred $152.50 to the child care's phone account from the IFC surplus account and transferred $659.44 in the program's payroll account.

There was some concern expressed by committee members about the amount left in the surplus account. ASUO Finance Coordinator Mike Sauerwein assured the committee there was still $4,000 in the account, and that had to last about three-and-a-half weeks.

The new fiscal year begins July 1, and the "roll over" from the old budget to the new one will replenish that account, he said.

Baldwin said he expected the next meeting to take place sometime the first week of summer term. At the meeting, the committee will consider a request by the EMU Computer Lounge for funds from the over-realized incidental fee account, he said.

Money collected from student incidental fees above what is expected from projected enrollment figures goes into the over-realized account. This money goes to fund more major projects than the regular budget can handle.

Time schedule to carry more information

By Chris Norred

The University Registrar is working on changes in the "Time Schedule of Classes" that could make registration smoother next fall.

Students can expect to see all of the same information that currently is included in the time schedule, Registrar Herb Chereck said.

But more complete and organized information about prerequisites and extra fees will be added, he said.

The format of the time schedule is being revised slightly so the course numbers will be listed before the course names. Chereck said that is part of the process of developing a master catalog file that includes every course taught at the University.

One purpose of such a file is to make sure courses that stay the same keep the same titles and numbers to avoid confusion, Chereck said.

The most visible change in the time schedule next year will be the listing of prerequisites beside each course. In the past, prerequisites have been listed in footnotes below each department's section in the time schedule or not listed at all.

The University's General Catalog, which lists and describes all courses, does include prerequisites. But University students do not receive free catalogs. And many students rely on the time schedule without referring to the catalog when registering, Chereck said.

"Although everyone should use a catalog, now students can see the prerequisites (in the time schedule) without using the catalog," he said.

Students often face problems because they are unaware of prerequisites when they register for courses.

"If students sign up for courses without the appropriate background, they could just sink," Chereck said. "The intent of prerequisites is to let students know the background that is needed for the course."

Often, the people at registration tables are unaware of the prerequisites, and even when they do know about them they are unable to check if the student has fulfilled the prerequisites.

With the changes in the time schedule, instructors who register students still won't know if students have fulfilled prerequisites. "It's still a self-auditing," Chereck said. "But it provides the opportunity to help advise students and appraise them of the background they need for courses. I like to refer to it as an advising enhancement."

The time schedule also will list the specific amount of extra fees for self-support courses and physical education courses on the same line as the course.
