night," Couwenhoven said.

"If the situation calls for someone being cited, security has the capability to file a complaint," Couwenhoven said. "Anyone can file a complaint," she added.

"In the past, T-shirt security has been effective and does the job as far as security needs," she said.

"Everyone has been happy and works well with security," she added.

Meanwhile, construction of the temporary campground for the concert is proceeding on schedule, according to Jesse Bolton, the campground's coordinator.

"We have had no problems," Bolton said.

A large circular ring of sawdust at the east end of the Autzen Stadium parking lot marks the spot where the campground will be erected. Water and toilets also will be provided by the University.

The vehicle area will be located at the south end of the parking lot. Cars entering the lot will be charged $10 on Thursday and Friday, $5 on Saturday and $3 on Sunday.

"There will be no vehicles in the campground area," Bolton said.

"The monies (from the vehicle fees) go to defray the expenses of toilets, water service, and the labor to put the services together," Bolton said.

The campsite will open at 6 p.m. this evening, he said.

"Campers won't be let in before then. I cannot be responsible for them," Bolton said.

"There is no fee for the campsite," he added.

Couwenhoven and Sandy Walton, business office manager for the University, refused to comment, however, on whether people walking to the campground would be allowed to camp free of charge.

the following Monday at 10 a.m., Bolton said.

Eugene Police Department services for traffic control the day of the concert will cost $21,328, according to Walton.

"Service charges for extra patrols from the Washington-Jefferson Bridge to Skinner Butte from July 17 through the 20 will be $18,376.50," Walton said.
