Higher education tuition set to rise

By Will Holbert
Of the Emerald

Tuition rates will rise 3 percent this fall after a two-year freeze.

The State Board of Higher Education made the decision to increase tuition rates statewide at its July 24 meeting.

Undergraduate residents at the University will pay $69 more in yearly tuition, nonresidents $150.50 more. Graduate resident and nonresident tuition will rise by $86.5 and $125 respectively.

The main cause for the increase is a 3 percent increase in instruction fees. The 3 percent increase will go into balancing the higher education budget and into alleviating the effect of inflation on the cost of supplies and services.

"We're just real happy that it was kept at 3 percent instead of the 7 percent that was also recommended," said Kasey Brooks, ASUO president.

The 3 percent increase will raise an estimated $7.2 million for the state's higher education system.

Faculty salaries did not prompt the increase, according to Jim Sellers, director of communication for the Oregon State System of Higher Education. The 2 percent salary increase for state system faculty will take effect this academic year, but salary increase was previously budgeted for and did not affect the tuition hike.

The board froze tuition rates in 1985 because of concerns that Oregon's higher education system was charging the highest rates in the nation for its state schools. The state system is now third, behind Colorado and Washington.

The instruction fee is one of three fees that make up the tuition rate. In addition to the instruction fee increase is a recommended $2 increase in the health service fee and a $9 increase in the incidental fee.

The board also approved the minority student tuition waiver, the number of waivers will be set by the board later.

Water fun available to disabled

By Sean Nelson
Of the Emerald

Individuals with physical disabilities can participate in water sports with the help of professionals Friday and Saturday at the first annual Water Festival at Fern Ridge Reservoir's Zumwalt Park.

The workshop is sponsored by the Oregon Rehabilitation Center of Sacred Heart Hospital, the Eugene Parks Specialized Recreation program and the Emerald Valley Tournament Water Skiing Association.

Also participating are the Mission Bay Aquatic Center, the Bend Metro Parks and Recreation Department, and the Shared Outdoor Adventure and Recreation program from Portland.

The first day, professionals will train people with physical disabilities to develop adaptive water skills and to use safety and technical equipment for sports such as rowing, river rafting, kayaking, water skiing and sailing.

The second day individuals with physical disabilities may participate in any one of the water sports offered.

"There will be professionals from different recreation programs," according to Sue Harnly, coordinator of the Eugene Parks and Recreation Program for Persons with Physical Disabilities. "Mostly they are going to be therapeutic recreation specialists who are working in a number of different specialties - from community, clinical and outdoor recreation programs," Harnly said.

Others interested in the outdoors, commercial aquatic outfitters, and family and friends of disabled persons will also participate, she added.

"Basically one of the barriers we come up against is that other able-bodied people don't believe that (the disabled can) participate in (water sports), Harnly said. "All it takes is a little adaptive equipment and some innovation and anybody can participate in almost any sport," she added.

"We are willing to try whatever it takes to make it work for a disabled person," Harnly said. "Maybe they won't be able to stand up and waterski like an able-bodied person can, but there are ways that they can water ski," she added.

Registration begins at 8 a.m. and the events begin at 9 a.m. They will continue until around 5 p.m.

"We're receiving the equipment from Eugene Parks, Mission Bay and Bend Metro Parks as well as all the other sponsors of the event," Harnly said. "Expertise will also be shared by the sponsors of the event," she added.

Those interested in participating in the water festival can contact Sue Harnly at the Eugene Parks and Recreation program, 687-5322, Linda Phelps, 687-5311, or Tim Shearer of the Oregon Rehabilitation Center, 686-6362.
