

doesn't run out of money early. They have no idea how many people will take advantage of the program, but because of increased publicity, they are hoping for greater program useage. The motion was made again, and IFC Summer Chairman Bob Baldwin expressed two concerns he had about eliminating the need category. The first concern centered around his distrust of the way Financial Aid determined need, saying the need level set isn't always reflective of the situation. His second thought was if the subsidy program did run out of funds winter or spring term, money could come from the ASUO overrealized account and more fine tuning of the program could be done then, he said. The motion failed 2-2 with Thompson and J.B. Leahy approving. Baldwin and Armando Morales were in opposition.
