Exceptional locations for studying assure accomplishment, quietness

It's fall again and time once more to shake the sand out of your brain, put on your raggy-wool sweater and get back into the educational groove. For most that means — sooner or later — getting your act together, hitting the books and studying.

Those new to the University will soon find out what veterans already know: The right study place can make all the difference in how your allotted homework time succeeds. Here are reviews of a few favorite study places around the campus.

Your dormroom, apartment or house

The most obvious place to hammer out homework is hardly the best. You probably eat, sleep and spend most of your waking hours there, so why add studying to that list?

There is too many distractions at your place. Besides the T.V., stereo and telephone, there is always the obnoxious roommate who decides that Tuesday is "as good of a night as any" to bring three cases of Rainier and six friends home to listen to his Black Sabbath collection.

Can you afford to gamble with the LSAT, GMAT, GRE, or MCAT?

Probably not. Great grades alone may not be enough to impress the grad school of your choice.

Scores play a part. And that's how Stanley H. Kaplan can help.

The Kaplan course teaches test-taking techniques, reviews course subjects, and increases the odds that you'll do the best you can do.

So if you've been out of school for a while and need a refresher, or even if you're fresh out of college, do what over 1 million students have done. Take Kaplan. Why take a chance with your career?
