Predictions

UCLA has been a story in itself, as USC turned away from the tailback and looked to a veteran quarterback, Rodney Peete, to guide the team's fortunes.

New coach Larry Smith developed a reputation as a running coach at Arizona before moving cross-conference to Southern Cal. But Smith is changing his style somewhat this year to capitalize on the multiple talents of his signal-caller. He still hopes to grind out 200 yards a game on the ground, but Peete's athleticism won't go untapped.

Running back Ryan Knight will be expected to pull a bigger share of the load this year, but at last word he wasn't even at the top of Smith's depth chart. Knight was the team's leading ground gainer in 1986, but his 3.6-yards-per-carry average and 536 total yards were hardly up to Trojan standards.

Both the offense and defense of USC should be well protected by big, veteran lines. Offensive guard Brent Parkinson (6 feet 6 inches, 250 pounds) and offensive tackle Dave Cadigan (6 feet 5 inches, 270 pounds) are massive, while center John Katinick (6 feet 1 inch, 250 pounds) has the perfect build to root around with the Pac-10's strongest nose guards.

WSU to have trouble

The defensive line is anchored by sophomore Dan Owens, whose 6-foot-4-inch frame has room for more than the 235 pounds he is currently carrying. Sophomore Tim Ryan is a potential All-American at tackle who will only get better.

5. Stanford Cardinal

Projected Record: 8-3 (5-3)

The firepower that coach Jack Elway can generate this season will be all he can muster — as in Brad Muster, the Pac-10 Offensive Player-of-the-Year in 1986. Muster rushed for more than 1,000 yards and 12 touchdowns last year in addition to leading the Pac-10 in receiving for the second straight year.

Muster is a double threat in an era of specialists. So while he may carry Stanford to eight wins single-handedly, don't expect his name to raise much more than a ripple come Heisman Trophy voting time despite the attention being paid him now.

Muster won't be the only weapon in Elway's arsenal, just the first. All three leading scorers from last year's squad, which managed an 8-4 record and received a Gator Bowl bid, return for the fall campaign.

Receiver Jeff James snared 52 catches for eight TDs last year, and kicker David Sweeney is also back. But he must improve on last year's woeful 4-15 field goal conversion rate to be an asset instead of a liability.

The defense was the biggest surprise in Stanford's surprising 1986, and this year's model will find it difficult to repeat last year's heroics. Although it ranked just fifth in the Pac-10, the Cardinal defense led the conference in turnover ratio (plus 15) and allowed the fewest points of any team during the conference schedule.

To maintain that bend-but-don't-break level of performance, the Cardinal will have to get big years out of strong safety Brad Humphreys and the veteran linebacking tandem of Kurt Colehower and Barry McKeever. Linebacker Dave Wyman was the heart of the defense last year, and he will be sorely missed.

6. Arizona Wildcats

Projected Record: 5-6 (3-5)

New head coach Dick Tomey won games at a 57 percent clip with the University of Hawaii before moving back onto the continent to take over at Arizona. But he will find the going a little tougher in the Pac-10 than in the Western Athletic Conference, and replacing both the leading passer and rusher from a year ago won't make his task any easier.

The Wildcats lost equally from the offense and defense at graduation, and Tomey must now fill five vacancies on both sides of the ball. The most gaping holes are at quarterback, tailback, and linebacker, and that spells trouble with a capital B.

Art Greathouse, who picked up 404 yards and four TDs in limited duty last year, hopes to fill the void left by David Adams, who averaged nearly five yards a carry on his way to 1,175 yards and seven TDs in 1986.

Greathouse, all 5 feet 10 inches and 195 pounds of him, should have success as long as he stays behind huge tackle Jeff "Rhino" Rinehart. At 6 feet 2 inches and 327 pounds, Rinehart provides an imposing shield.

The quarterback position was still wide open entering fall drills. Alfred Jenkins was a three-year starter for Arizona, and threw for 1,573 yards and 10 TDs last season.
