

Correction

The Oregon Daily Emerald incorrectly reported Monday that the ASUO Legal Services attorney is precluded by law from defending University students against felony charges. The attorney is precluded by the contract with the State Board of Higher Education, not by Oregon law.

The Emerald incorrectly reported Friday that the ASUO was sponsoring a brown bag forum on Oct. 13. The forum has been canceled. The Emerald regrets any inconvenience or confusion this may have caused.

A Northwest coastal tradition

The EMU Art Gallery is currently featuring Northwest Coastal Native American Contemporary Prints by three Canadian artists.

The show, sponsored by the Student Activities Resource Office and arranged by visual Arts coordinator Rukshana Edwards, consists of the works of Art Thompson, Danny Dennis and Patrick Amos. The exhibit will be displayed through Nov. 6.

Edwards said she chose to focus on contemporary Native American art because she believes the genre doesn't receive much attention. The works are courtesy of the Pegasus Gallery in Corvallis.

This show is here also in conjuncture with the upcoming Association of College Unions-International Region 14 conference on Oct. 22-24, an event also sponsored by the SARO office, Edwards said.

After the Native American Exhibit, Edwards will work with the Council for Human Rights in Latin America to bring an exhibit from Nicaragua entitled "Art and Reality."
