Do you think the University is living up to its accreditation report?

'I think the accreditation report was fair and accurate. The quality of education is very accurately characterized, and unfortunately in Oregon, the University is less well recognized than it is elsewhere in the country.'

— David Povey, faculty member, PPPM.

'I think they need a new library. I'm with the architecture school and that school lives up to standard, but I think we need a new library.'

— Kevin Low, senior, architecture.

'They are building more facilities for us, and they are trying to develop the physical science department... I think they are doing it, and also updating it to keep up with other universities.'

— Tony Baker, freshman, TCF.

'I think they are doing a great job. There are services that I don't even know exist, and when I hear about them, I go 'Wow', you know. I think it's good!'

— Jo Hong, freshman, pre-business.

'I think the services are adequate, but certain services can be improved. Maybe like in registration and help in learning services around campus.'

— Kevin Serrao, freshman, undeclared.

'I think they are doing a good job. It's worked out just fine in my opinion.'

— Ellen Wulf, freshman, art history.

ASUO OFFICE OF STUDENT ADVOCACY

A place to go for

- counseling as to your rights, remedies and interests as a student
- advice on effective problem-solving options on campus
- representation in campus-related grievances
