numbers have fallen.

"Derek's probably feeling some pressure," said Oregon running back coach Gary Campbell. "He's a young player (19) with a lot of talent and he's getting better. But the lack of playing time because of injuries has stifled his improvement. He's had leg, feet, and ankle injuries and it's been hard for him to stay healthy."

Homecoming game brings Oregon alumni to Autzen

Autzen Stadium will be filled with hundreds of alumni Saturday, back to root for the Oregon football team against Pacific-10 Conference foe California.

But at least three Oregon alumni will be doing everything they can to help the Golden Bears spoil the Ducks' homecoming.

Cal head coach Bruce Snyder is a graduate of Oregon who played under Len Casanova in 1960 and 1962. After graduation, Snyder worked as an assistant under Casanova, now athletic director emeritus at the University, and Jerry Frei.

Two of Snyder's assistants, Terry Shea and Tom Keele, also matriculated in Eugene and played for the Ducks. Keele was a member of Oregon's 1958 Rose Bowl team.

"He's performed well," Campbell added, "but with those type of injuries, he's going to be out of condition."

Loville's injuries include a bothersome "turf toe" wound, the result of playing on artificial surface for the first five games of the season.

Head coach Rich Brooks had big plans for number 32, until the injuries hit.

"His role in the offense this year has been limited to a great extent because of the injuries. He's been hobbled all season, ever since the first drive against Colorado. He hasn't produced as we'd liked, but he's missed a lot of practice time," Brooks said.

Could it be the sophomore jinx? Loville doesn't think so.

"I try to not let that (the jinx) bother me. I don't want to mess with it," he said.

But as Loville goes, so go the Ducks. It's no coincidence that those final three games of 1986 were all Oregon wins.

"As a team, we're playing pretty well right now. We've had some ups and some downs, but it's all been positive," Loville said.

All positive except for the injuries. Loville's backfield teammate, Berry, has not been immune to the injury bug. The Ducks' starting fullback will miss Saturday's game with California because of a hand injury.

But with his earlier comments about an aggressive running style, Loville sounds like he may be ready to take on the look of a fullback.

Loville admits that he is striving to become more of a power runner, but adds that he "ad-
