

Swimming

a $17,000 cushion going into the next year."

Chris Voelz, University associate athletic director, said the University's decision to drop swimming was a hard one to make.

"We definitely felt bad that we had to reduce any opportunities for student athletes. The question we were faced with was: 'do we cut money from every program and become less competitive in all sports, or do we cut an entire program and maintain our competitive values in the overall program?'"

Van Rossen said, "they (the Athletic Department) have been very sensitive. They felt bad because it was a discredit to the University. It all happened so fast. They could have sat down and figured something out. The program could have been saved."

Voelz said the decision to drop swimming "was not open for a lot of discussion" because the failure of a ballot measure in the student elections had basically decided the fate of the program.

"We knew that if the ballot failed something would happen. We just didn't know what," Voelz said. I think it's just a result of tough times in college athletics. We're seeing a lot of it around the nation."

The swimming performance teams' next meet is Friday, Nov. 6, at Leighton Pool against Highline College of Tacoma.
