Prepared by board members John Alltucker and Richard Hensley, the statement was first made public in Thursday's Eugene Register-Guard.

Olum admitted he received a copy of the statement during a three-hour meeting with Alltucker and Hensley on the morning of Nov. 22. The board considerably revised the statement and issued its approval on the letter released Wednesday.

That letter also suggested another reason the board won't allow Olum to continue until 1992. "Institutional presidents and chancellors are given annual letters of appointment," the letter said. "No president has a five or even a three year appointment, and it would be inconsistent and unwise for the board to accede to your request for a June 30, 1992, retirement date." Olum challenged that statement as "contrary to the way that I have approached this matter of my retirement from the very beginning." He said it falsely implies he had asked for a contract or irrevocable agreement that would guarantee his appointment until 1992. Board policy presently allows for setting a retirement date at a maximum of four years in the future following an evaluation of a university president. Had Olum been evaluated under this policy his retirement date could have been set for June 30, 1992.
