Mixed success in Montana for Ducks

By Craig Harris

The Oregon women's basketball team traveled to a land where visitors aren't welcome as they experienced their first loss of the year.

The Ducks became yet another victim to the Lady Griz of Montana, who pushed their home record to 69-2 and beat the Ducks 67-55 in the championship game of the Domino's Pizza Classic in Missoula, Mont.

Oregon, 2-1, led 54-51 with 7:57 to play, but Montana outscored the Ducks 16-1, and sent Oregon on a scoring drought after tying the score at 55. The Ducks never saw the visitors scoreboard blink after the 6:37 mark.

"We did not have that great of a game and the stats reflect that," Oregon coach Elwin Heiny said.

He wasn't kidding.

Only one Oregon player, senior Sheila Sattiewhite, scored in double figures and the team shot a miserable 39 percent from the floor. Adding to that, Oregon turned the ball over 17 times and standouts Jacquie Semeniuk and Stephanie Kasperski were limited to eight points apiece.

"We had trouble executing our offense," Semeniuk said, "I don't think they keyed on us though, our shots weren't open, and they were a tough and tall team. Every player on their starting lineup was above six feet.

"We didn't shoot well as a team and it could have been a combinaton of things. (for the loss) We felt a lot of pressure, we made turnovers, and we didn't execute," Semeniuk said.

"Montana is tough. They have only lost two times in the last 71 contests. It is also very tough to go in there and win. They were ready for us and we did not look as good," Heiny said, "They have a good crowd and a good team. I wish we had a chance to play them again."

Although the Ducks won't have another crack at the Lady Griz, Heiny said the trip may help the Ducks in the long run.

"We are a young team and we are still learning. We have a long way to go and we need to get back to reality. We have a lot to work on," Heiny said.

While Montana put the first dent in Oregon's fledgling season, the Ducks did post their second win Friday night, beating up on Oral Roberts University 85-64.

Oregon blitzed to a 26-9 lead after the first seven minutes and cruised to a 43-24 lead at the half. Kasperski and Semeniuk led the Ducks in scoring, dropping in 16 apiece. Kasperski added a career-high 15 rebounds in only 28 minutes because Heiny flooded the court with reserves in the first half.

The Ducks continued to play run-and-gun in the second half scoring 42 points and shooting 48 percent for the night. The only sore spot for the Ducks came in the turnover category.

The Ducks coughed the ball up 31 times and still held the Titans, who scored more than 80 in their two previous games, to 64 points.

Despite the weekend split, Oregon placed two players, Semeniuk and Kasperski, on the all-tournament team. They joined Montana's Marti Leibenguth, who scored a game high 17 points against Oregon, and Cheryl Brandell. Oral Roberts' Kim Ogden completed the five player all-star squad.

Thank You!!!

Thanks to all the Computer Graphics Conference volunteers for the many long and hard hours you worked. The conference was a great success and we appreciate your help.
