Meat Puppets show harder side

Meat Puppets
"Huevos"

Way down in the land of the sun reside the band members of the Meat Puppets, with images of early ZZ Top slipping through their minds. The brothers Kirkwood turn their effects on and Apache warriors ride the Arabian Sunset in the mystic western sky. Whoa, dude.

Meat Puppets is not the punk band one may believe it to be. Meat is what every good American loves, and Puppets are safe, little fake critters that fascinate youth. Pure Southern fried at it's best, as they would say "high on cornbread."

"Huevos" is the bit harder side of the Puppets, sort of their answer to the party album for heads. For those who are unfamiliar with linguistics, huevos means eggs in Spanish, or kids with funny haircuts in Eugene.

once more pulls through in time for the Christ's birthday and asks the all encompassing question: "Is there a heaven, is there a hell?"

A true epic in the making.

Envision a video with young Dameon of 14 years. His walls are covered with metal band posters. His grades are bad. His parents just don't understand him. He knows all the chords to Rush solos and he has backslid into an endless time zone.

A perma-grin covers his face as he is "burning with fire" from the bud of life. Tiffany, his little sister, runs for her life as "Eternal Idol" tears into Dameon's soul. The beast is now in control and Dameon wants to gut a cat. "Sinners say your prayers tonight, your judgment day is here," bellows new lead singer Tony Martin.

Black Sabbath is still the best of the mesh-metal bands, like Whitesnake, Crue, Poison, etc.

Their last LP, "Seventh Star," really messed with Dameon's high and he wants it back. "Idol" is a full opening of the universe beginning with "The Shining" — a sure-fire hit. The rest of the album uses the classic metal form.

"Scarlet Permenel" is one of those classically structured songs that shows, "Hey, it's not all that bad, Mom."

"Idol" is the record to get the kid brother who thinks Satan is cool — and for anyone who didn't grow up on Sabbath.

Chris Metzler

Definitely not one of their best achievements, the songs are not as internally spiraling as "Up On The Sun" — more of the rollin' stock. Curt Kirkwood doesn't go all out on his complex guitar runs. Instead he opts for a steady groove.

"Fruit" is basically another version of "Away." "Sexy Music" is just that, a solar entry into wonderland.

Again, this album is not the group's best. But it goes without saying that anything by the Meat Puppets is godly.

The Meat Puppets will rock in Eugene on Jan. 28, so watch out.
