Research plan nears completion

By Bryan Houston
Emerald Reporter

The Riverfront Research Park's master site plan may be completed by the end of January, members of the Riverfront Research Park Commission said at its Wednesday meeting.

Once the plan is completed, it will be subjected to the project's Design Advisory Committee and commission for review, which in turn will make recommendations to University President Paul Olum and the Eugene City Council in late February and early March. Final plan approval also is scheduled for that time.

University project representative Diane Wiley updated commission members on the regional strategy program. She said the second draft of the Regional Strategy Application had been sent to the Oregon Department of Economic Development for comment, and feedback on the application is expected by Tuesday.

Counties that file the Regional Strategy Application with the Oregon Legislature are eligible for $25 million to develop economic projects. If the economic department approves the application, then the commission must hold a public hearing and get Oregon State Board of Higher Education and governor approval.

City project representative Cathy Briner updated commission members on the progress of initiative petitions that have been submitted to alter or block development of the Riverfront Research Park. Only two of the five initiatives concerning the project are being circulated for citizens' signatures.

One petition concerns city urban renewal projects and calls for voter approval before funds from city taxes can be used for urban renewal projects. In order to put the initiative on the May 18 ballot, backers must submit 5,520 signatures by Feb. 5.

So far the petition has received more than 5,100 signatures.

The other initiative being circulated seeks to rezone the banks of the Willamette River where the research park is to be constructed. The initiative would create a Recreation/Natural Resource Zone, setting aside the land for recreational uses.

The petition currently has 5,200 signatures.

In other business, commission member Dan Williams said lease and development agreements still have to be negotiated with the Carley Capital Group, the project coordinator. The commission must negotiate the rental structure — the significant amount of money that will be paid for the land — define the land to be leased and reach a lease agreement with the Carley Group, he said.

Commission Chairman R. A. "Gus" Keller unanimously was re-elected as chairman, a two-year term. Dan Giustina unanimously was elected vice chairman, replacing Sally Weston, who is serving her last year on the commission.
