6-foot-3, and they are both true freshmen.

"They are a huge team. We will have to see what happens," Hill said. "Unless we get some turnovers, use our half-court trap and play aggressive man-to-man (defense), it could be a long night."

Hill also said the Beavers wouldn't try to full-court press because they lack the necessary quickness to make it effective. But Hill may change her mind, because the Beavers lead the league in steals and Oregon is ninth in turnover margin. Oregon's turnover rate is 4.7 times its steal rate.

Although Oregon State may be smaller than the Ducks and by Hill's standards slower, the Beavers still have one of the Pac-10's top scorers in Chelle Flamoe.

Flamoe is the conference's second-leading scorer, averaging 20.4 points a game. She also leads her team in steals, field goal percentage and free throw accuracy. On Tuesday she was named as a first team All-America and the GTE/CoSIDA Academic Player of the Year in women's college basketball.

Although Flamoe is Oregon

State's big gun, Heiny says no new game plan will be developed for her. "(She) is a good shooter, but we haven't worked on anything specific," he said. "We'll have to see what happens and adjust. I hope we don't just have to stop her. Hopefully one plan will stop them all and do the job."
