Men's tennis loses to Whitman at home

By Duane Dungannon

Give the Oregon men's tennis team a B-plus.

"I think we were a little tired from studying," said Oregon coach Buzz Summers after his team dropped a 5-4 decision to visiting Whitman College on Saturday.

"I thought this team was beatable; we just weren't ready," he added.

Summers added that his top two seeds, Pat Jennings and James Hazard, both straight-A students, looked tired in their respective losses Saturday.

"I was on another planet today," Jennings said after he and Hazard lost a straight-sets doubles match to Whitman's

Phil Ansdell and Eugene Kim 6-3, 6-4. "We were up 4-1 in the second set, but I don't know what happened," Jennings said. "I feel really bad about that because if we had won that, the team would have won the match today."

The loss spoiled a fine performance by sophomore Kevin Cory, who defeated Whitman's Roberto Carcamo 6-2, 6-3, and teamed with freshman Ted Rubin to down Whitman's doubles team of Dave Olafsson and Jeff Northam 6-2, 6-3.

"This was our first win as a doubles team," Cory said. "I thought our chemistry really came together today." Cory also played one of his best singles matches, and attributed his success to his serve and solid play at the net.

Oregon sophomore Brian Copeland provided another big performance, winning his singles match 7-6 (7-4), 6-3 over Whitman's Jeff Northam.

"Brian is playing as well as he has ever played," Summers said. "He and Cory were the real bright spots for us today."

"I think Oregon's a lot tougher this year," Whitman coach Art Furman said. "We beat them 8-1 last year, and I knew they would be chomping at the bit to get another shot at us. We came ready for a war."
