Berry Continued from Page 3

But even with Berry, the statistics lie. They do not tell the whole story. Berry is bigger than his numbers. His personality and attitude are not reflected in the record book, but it is Berry's character that makes him a hero to his fans.

Consider his outlook toward both track and field, and football: "My attitude toward the two are the same," Berry said. "I want to win the battle, I try to practice well, train well, then go out and do it."

During a ten minute interview, Berry must have said hello to at least fifteen people, asking them how they were doing. He knew them all by name.

Berry's perpetual smile is probably a result of treating his sports like sports and not like a job.

"I guess I'm still like a kid trying to have a lot of fun doing both and not thinking about doing just track or just football," he said. "Practice isn't a lot of fun. Having all your buddies beat on you and each other isn't nice at all, the only time to have fun is in the games against someone else."

Then does any of Berry's personality from track seep through to football?

"I hope so," he said. "I'm known around here because of track. I'd like to think that a little bit of the track stuff is in their (the fans) minds when I'm out playing football"

But, while on the field, "the track stuff" is out of his mind.

"I don't think about it a lot; right now it's football season. I
